Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Further steps to give the nations allied against the Central Powers complete control of their resources so that they may be devoted to war purposes, combat the danger of Germany profiting through commercial dealings, and conserve tonnage, were announced today by the War Trade Board.

On and after May 27, according to an agreement just reached, no commodities, except in a comparatively few cases covered by general import licenses, shall be approved for shipment to the United States by the Consuls in any country in the world until applications for licenses have been acted upon favorably by the War Trade Board and the number of the United States license covering the shipment is submitted.

This practice has been effective in connection with the restricted list, but the present ruling makes it applicable to all commodities.

It is believed that, in conjunction with the new regulations which make it necessary for exporters in the United States to obtain the approval of the War Missions of Great Britain, France, Italy, and Belgium in this country before applying for export licenses, the rulings concerning imports will go far to prevent unnecessary production in any of the nations allied against Germany, and will practically close the last door upon those who have schemed to obtain sanction for commercial relations which might aid the Central Powers.

Shipments in German Interest.

It has been found, for instance, that on several occasions shipments have reached the United States which, upon their arrival here, were not acceptable to the War Trade Board. It is believed that in some cases the shipment of these goods was brought about by persons seeking to aid Germany. Other shipments, made in good faith, were considered unessential to the war program by the board.

The Government was then confronted with the problem of determining what to do with such shipments upon their arrival in American ports. To return them would require the use of considerable cargo space which could not be spared. As a result of this situation, the shipments, as a rule, have been permitted entrance to the country, except in cases where the evidence of German interests being involved has been established beyond a reasonable doubt.

"The agreements which have now been entered into are considered of the greatest importance in bringing about the close co-ordination of all the principal nations at war with Germany in effectually preventing waste of industrial resources as represented by labor, materials, and factories and in making Germany in fact, as well as in theory, a commercial outlaw.

It is pointed out also that the studies involved in the new procedure and the records which will be obtained covering practically all industries in the allied nations, will prove invaluable in future trade relations and result in an international understanding among the allied nations which will make possible a complete control of their commercial relations in the future.

The War Trade Board, in announcing today to United States consular agents throughout the world that no invoices were to be consulated except as provided in the plan outlined, made the significant comment that the new system "will also give the War Trade Board an opportunity of passing upon all importations from a standpoint of enemy trade connection before shipments are put in transit."

In this connection all industries in the South American countries, where many millions of dollars of German capital are invested, either openly or in secret, will face the danger of overproduction of goods for shipment to the United States unless they first wait for applications for exportation to this country to be passed upon by the War Trade Board. Careful investigation of all applications to license such shipments, where there is suspicion that German interests are involved, will be made.

The cases where general import licenses remain in force, and where the German Troops from Rumania Have Arrived in Belgium

LONDON, May 14.—"Reports from Liége say that one cavalry division from Rumania has passed through that city, going westward, and that more troops from Rumania are expected on the Belgian front," says a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Amsterdam.

"Orders have been given for all other traffic on the railways to stop in order to allow these troops to pass," the correspondent adds.

It is probable that the cavalry referred to by the correspondent belongs to the German forces which were operating in Rumania and have been released from that front through the signing of the peace treaty between Rumania and the Central Powers.

OVERMAN BILL PASSED BY HOUSE

Vote Is 295 to 2, and Measure Goes to President in Form Adopted by Senate.

FINAL FIGHT PERFUNCTORY

Republicans Saw Its Futility—Gillett and Longworth Criticise Powers Given to President.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The House today passed the Overman co-ordination bill by a vote of 295 to 2. Representative Sterling of Illinois and Gillett of Massachusetts voted in the negative. Thus, in less than two days, the House disposed of the bill.

Republican opposition, waged to exclude the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Federal Reserve Board from agencies of the Government subject to co-ordination, was helpless to force a change. The measure, as it passed the House, is identical with the bill as it came from the Senate. The bill, therefore, goes directly to the President, who is expected to approve it promptly, and the power the President has asked for to speed up war production and co-ordinate and expand the executive departments will be at his disposal within the next few days.

After the Republicans of the House had seen the inability of the minority of the Senate to effect changes in the measure, the fight in its last legislative stages became merely perfunctory. Many Republican members, while opposed to the spirit of the bill, voted for it on the ground that they were not willing to hamper the President in any way, and, with this legislation, all power to conduct the war would be placed in his hands.

Representatives F. H. Gillett and Nicholas Longworth, in speeches today, pointed out what they declared were provisions that seemed to confer too much power upon the Executive. Representative Swager Sherley of Kentucky, Chairman of the Appropriation Committee, made the chief speech in defense of the legislation.

Gives Away Powers of Congress.

"This is a most extraordinary bill," said Representative Gillett. "It gives away all the powers of Congress over the organization of the departments, and it gives away all the power which confirmation by the Senate gives, because under it the President can assign duties which have been given to a man confirmed by the Senate to one who has not been. The only argument offered is that it is a war necessity. I have found it impossible for me to vote in favor of it, although I have up to now voted for practically all of the legislation asked by the Administration."

"I think this bill illustrates a reluctance which the Administration has shown throughout to take us into its confidence and unwillingness to tell the truth to the people all through the war. We do not wish to know secrets which it would impair the progress of the war to divulge, but I think we are entitled to know what is to be accomplished by a bill like this.

"The people and all of us throughout last year were lulled into a sort of unreasonable security. We were assured by the Administration that in all the departments everything was running smoothly, that the war preparations were all being rapidly prosecuted, and we all imagined, at least most of the people imagined, that the departments were functioning well.

"Suddenly the disclosures of the Senate Military Committee showed us that our security was only imaginary, that what we suspected and had been given reason to suspect was not accurate. That gave a shock to the American people and to Congress. It showed us the truth had not been divulged, and we had been given to understand things were vastly more favorable than they were."

Bills to be Taken on Faith.

"This is another of that class of bills which originated out of Congress," said Mr. Longworth, "and which we are expected to take on faith. Drafted probably by a clerk in some executive de-

SENATE MAY NARROW INQUIRY

President Willing Aircraft Investigation Should Be Made.

COMMITTEE WILL AGREE

AMAZING ARMY DETECTIVE

Mr. Sheets Tells How "Mr. Baber" Tried to Get Him to Pump His Friend Borglum.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—After a conference with President Wilson at the White House this evening, Senator Thompson of Kansas, Chairman of the Committee on Audit and Contingent Expenses of the Senate, told a representative of THE NEW YORK TIMES that Senator Chamberlain's resolution, now before his committee, to authorize the Military Affairs Committee to proceed with an unrestricted inquiry into the conduct of the war, probably would not be reported out to the Senate, unless appreciably modified. Under this resolution the Military Affairs Committee had intended going ahead with its investigation of the aircraft program.

Senator Thompson quoted the President as objecting to the unlimited scope of the resolution, which, if passed, would enable the Military Affairs Committee not only to delve into aircraft production, but also every other phase of war activity.

"The President feels that the proposal, as embraced in the resolution, to investigate the 'conduct of the war' is a reflection upon the Administration," said Senator Thompson. "He has no objection to the Military Affairs Committee investigating the aircraft program. In fact, he wants an investigation of that kind to be made, feeling that the people are entitled to know the actual facts.

"So many charges of incompetency, inefficiency, graft, and interference with aircraft production have been made that the President wants them aired. But he does not believe that an inquiry into every phase of war activity is at all necessary or that anything could be accomplished. It savors too much of 'snooping.'

"I am authorized by the President to say that he is in favor of an aircraft inquiry, but opposed to the broad investigation contemplated in the Chamberlain resolution as being entirely unnecessary."

Control of the Senate Purse.

Under the Chamberlain resolution the Military Affairs Committee would be authorized to go to any necessary expenditure to bring witnesses before it and prosecute an exhaustive inquiry relative to every feature of the conduct of the war. Without the authorization for unlimited expenditure the committee's inquiry could not go into the broad field of all war activity. Senator Thompson made it plain tonight that he would fight in the Audit Committee against granting the carte blanche desired by the Military Affairs Committee. He did not undertake to say what might be the attitude of other members of the Audit Committee.

"If the resolution is not modified in committee, so as to restrict the investigation and remove the provision for unlimited funds, it will be fought upon the floor of the Senate," said Mr. Thompson. "I believe, though, that the majority of the committee will follow the advice of the President. I think the committee favors an aircraft investigation, but, in view of the President's attitude, I do not believe the majority will want to go much further than that. The committee does not want to run counter to the President's wishes."

Senator Hitchcock, a member of the Military Affairs Committee, when informed tonight of What Senator Thompson had said after his conference with the President, told THE TIMES representative that there was no disposition on the part of the Military Affairs Committee to investigate all war activities.

"We are not seeking to embarrass the President," he said. "We want simply to go into phases of aircraft and other production, and I think the Senate as a whole wants that character of inquiry."

Senator Hitchcock said he believed the Military Affairs Committee would readily consent to the elimination of the "conduct of the war" phrase from the Chamberlain resolution, so as to confine it to production of war material. As to the suggestion of Senator Thompson that the Military Affairs Committee might not be allowed the unrestricted funds wanted for its inquiry, Senator Hitchcock said:

Not Worried About Funds.

"I am not much bothered about Senator Thompson's individual opinion. The Senate will know what is needed in the way of funds. I do not apprehend that there will be any difficulty in getting whatever money we need."

Senator Hitchcock was informed that Senator Thompson had said the Mili-

Airmen Dropped 6,033 Bombs on German Lines in April

TIGHTENS GERMAN GRIP ON AUSTRIA

Agreement of Kaisers Is Considered to Fix Vassalage of the Dual Monarchy.

BERLIN ARBITER ON PEACE

London Thinks Paris Resolutions May Be Applied to Meet Mitteleuropa Danger.

LONDON, May 14.—The meeting of Emperor Charles and Emperor William at German Great Headquarters has aroused keen speculation, which the official account of the conference has done little to satisfy. There is an inclination to take it for granted that the meeting resulted in giving Germany a firmer grip on Austria-Hungary and the Dual Monarchy's internal and external policies; in fact, that from now on Austria-Hungary will be little more than a German colony.

Emperor Charles is pictured as doing penance for his peace letters to France and as promising not to offend again. Emperor William and his military advisers are seen as having accepted this promise at its face value, but as taking in the way of security for its fulfillment more active control of Austrian affairs, to save them from anarchy, in the interest of the ruling German minority.

The fact that Germany has taken control of the Bohemian food supplies indicates that the Austrian Government is not adverse to German interference in its internal affairs.

Berlin Dictator of Peace Policy.

It is evident that hereafter the foreign policy of the Central Powers will be controlled more than ever by Berlin. While Austria may be used to launch peace offensives, they doubtless will be dictated by Germany. The question of Poland is believed to have been reconsidered. By the adoption of a new solution, a good portion of that country, including the industrial districts of Dombrovo, will be linked with Prussia.

Another matter which is understood to have been discussed is Austria's more active participation in the war, or, rather, in the offensives. German newspapers have long been complaining of the failure of Austria to attack Italy, desiring such a move in the hope of diverting some of the French and British troops which are offering such a strong defensive in France. They even suggest that the Hungarians should be able to handle the Italians, and that the Austrians should be sent to France to offset American reinforcements.

May Forecast Economic Clash.

The more distant outcome of the meeting of the Emperors and its cementing of a political and economic defensive alliance of the Central Powers is a realization that eventually must be faced in the materialization of the Mitteleuropa policy. It is argued that if this is accomplished, the natural reply of the Entente nations would be the placing in operation of the resolutions calling for economic pressure against Germany, known as the Paris resolutions, because it is contended that only by the strongest economic pressure could the Entente deal with the greatest unit of power ever known in the world's history.

Comments from Austrian papers reaching London tonight tend to confirm the opinion that the alliance of the Central Powers has been consolidated in an all-embracing manner. Vienna newspapers are unanimous in the view that a multitude of enemies necessitates self-preservation, and in demands that Germany and Austria-Hungary should give their defensive alliance a general character. They also emphasize that neither empire will give up its political, military, or economic personality.

The Fremdenblatt says that the two powers are united for common defense, not only as formerly against Russia, but also against any other powers which should attack either ally, and adds that in accordance with the political deepening of the alliance measures will also be taken to provide that the military domain will guarantee compensation to the German and Austro-Hungarian armies by which neither the individuality nor the organization of the armies of Germany or of Austria-Hungary will be assailed.

Discord with Hungary.

The benefits to be derived from peace with Rumania and the Ukraine and the economic relations between Austria and Hungary are now pressing questions. There is much bickering over the spoils. The Austrians are saying that the Hungarians, who refuse to feed Austria, have had more than their share.

In this connection, a Vienna dispatch to the Cologne Gazette says that there is marked disquiet in Austrian economic centres on account of the agreements with Rumania regarding the oil in-

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Tuesday, May 14.—The enemy raided the British lines near Morlancourt, south of Albert, this morning, but it was a case of the biter bit. Forty-eight prisoners or so were taken by the British, and they are certain of having killed many Germans.

It was obviously the enemy's intention to try the British strength in this sector. Now they know. Whenever they attack and in whatever force they attack along this part of the front, there is no doubt that they will have to pay a big price for any local success, because the British troops are determined to give them a rough time if they make the attempt.

It was fairly quiet along the Arras front today, with only random shelling on either side, and no indication of impending battle. There was a wonderfully bright light over the battlefields and the chalky lines of the old British trenches, and the new German trenches showed clear on the green carpet of woods that have grown over all this countryside, hiding shell craters and the litter of strife. British kite balloons were up in a long row, with a mile or so of sky space between them, like flying elephants tethered to earth by ropes.

I stared today at old Monchy on the hill and remembered the day a year ago when the British cavalry went up there under heavy shrapnel fire, and when the men had hard fighting for that ruined village on the heights.

Big Gun Fighting Leisurely.

There were a few woolly bears in the sky today and the enemy sent over a few other varieties of things that look best a long way off, and taped out a road with high explosives, for no obvious purpose, because no living soul was walking there on this sunny afternoon.

Some of the British monsters with their snouts out of the ground were bellowing back in a lazy way, but it was a scene when soldiers say there is "nothing doing," and only one's knowledge and not one's vision told one that across there in the German line tranquil under the cloudy blue sky there was lurking a menace which one day soon may make flaming fire over this country side and churn up these fields of wild flowers, these golden sheets of flowers, so that the earth will become white and barren again as before the Spring.

It rained heavily all day long yesterday over a wide area of the front, and today there are storm clouds in the sky in spite of bursts of sunshine revealing again all the freshness and color of the woods and fields. So much the better, for rain makes more difficult the toil and trouble of the enemy in bringing up his men and munitions for the next assault, which cannot now be long delayed except by the worst conditions of weather.

It would be idle to describe the small incidents of patrol work, sniping raids and daily routine while all the world is waiting in suspense for another battle of enormous challenge to all our hopes and fate. The enemy's guns are spasmodic in their violence of fire, and there is no long and steady bombardment over the wide stretch of line like that which used to precede big battles in the days of fixed positions and trench systems, which had to be smashed for days before there was any chance of entry.

British Guns Take Heavy Toll.

Last night and early this morning, as on all recent days and nights, the German artillery has selected certain targets and laid down a concentrated fire on them. The chief areas of their COPENHAGEN, May 14.—The Berlin correspondent of the Politiken states that a prominent German politician in an interview said the offensive on the western front had not turned out as expected. Too many lives had been lost, and Hindenburg therefore was stopped, but he still believed the German Army would succeed in making its way to the north coast. From there the German cannon would be able to blockade the Channel and reach the south coast of England. This probably would make it easier to bring about an armistice and peace negotiations, in which Germany would not aim at conquests. Then the war would be over.

The politician then stated that Germany did not want anything but the return of her colonies and supremacy in Madagascar. He thought that an armistice would take place this Summer.

COPENHAGEN, May 14, (Associated Press.)—In an interview in the Politiken a member of the Reichstag, who requested that his name be not used, said:

"We have lost, including killed, wounded, and prisoners, 3,000,000 men. Do you think that we intend to make foolish claims and send our children through another four years of war? Moreover, we shall have enough to do during the age of man to control the new Russian countries and secure their mercantile and industrial influence. Responsible German politicians only demand that the western powers shall give back our colonies."

MAURICE BECOMES 'MILITARY CRITIC'

General Retired After Controversy with British Premier to Write of the War.

Answers Comments on His Conduct Made by Lloyd George in the Commons.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 14.—The editor of The Daily Chronicle has asked me to become his military correspondent and I have accepted his offer. The Daily Chronicle has generously recognized that I acted as I did with a deep sense of the gravity of the step I took because I conceived it to be my duty.

I was not, as has been stated, a disgruntled soldier turned out of his job. I had been promised and was about to take up important employment in France, which of all things I most desired, and I think I may say without vanity that I had a promising career before me. That is all behind me, and I have left the service I love. I have therefore made a very real sacrifice—I hope not in vain.

I do not intend to indulge in any recriminations. My sole object will be to help my readers to get on with the war. If in future I have occasion to be critical, my criticism will be constructive.

Appealed to Parliament in Vain.

I appealed to Parliament to order an inquiry into the statements I had made. I failed in my appeal, and my case has not been heard. The explanations referred to in the official notice of my retirement had reference only to a breach of discipline, to which I, of course, pleaded guilty. I have paid the penalty for that breach of discipline which with very deep regret I felt myself bound to commit, and there is nothing more to be said. After the short personal explanation which follows I do not intend to reopen the question unless and until I am asked authoritatively to do so.

Obviously a newspaper controversy as to the correctness of facts stated in my letter of May 6, which I was and am prepared to substantiate before a tribunal appointed by Parliament, is impossible, as proof depends upon the production of confidential information. I feel, however, that I owe my readers a word of explanation on two comments which the Prime Minister made on my conduct, and these I can answer without disclosing secrets.

The Council at Versailles.

The first is as to my presence at Versailles at the session in which the question of taking over the line was discussed. I accompanied the British representatives to Versailles, and I was present at the first meeting of this session of the Supreme War Council. During the meetings held after the first I was in a corridor outside the council chamber, and in the intervals between the meetings was engaged on work in connection with questions under examination. I hold, therefore, that my statement that I was at Versailles at the time is justified.

As to the second point, the Prime Minister asked why I did not make any criticism of the Ministerial statements either to him or to my chief,

RAIDS INCESSANT ON FRENCH FRONT

Period Officially Called "Quiet" Is One of Shelling and Local Fights.

GERMANS DIG FEW TRENCHES

From a Staff Correspondent.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, May 14.—"Nothing important," runs the communiqué during the period of calm which precedes the great battle. Sometimes the wording is varied with the announcement of an artillery duel at a certain point, or a raid which brought in ten prisoners, or a local attack which succeeded in occupying such and such a hill or village.

How far these phrases are from expressing the reality! In warfare of today nothing is considered worth labeling an artillery duel if fewer than 10,000 shells are fired in twenty-four hours by either side on a front perhaps two or three miles wide. Sometimes the figure runs to twenty, thirty, or even a hundred thousand daily.

It is hard to realize what this means. Last Fall THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent visited a so-called quiet sector in Flanders, where the daily shell average was only four or five thousand. The air was full of the ceaseless and horrible din of flying shells followed by the roar of explosions and showers of deadly splinters. Here and there one met wounded men swathed in bandages, making their way to the rear, and as I passed along the trenches a battalion commander would say: "I had three men killed half an hour ago in the boyau of a dugout." That is "quiet" on the battlefront. An artillery duel worthy of mention in a communiqué is far more terrible. And that is the daily experience of the allied soldiers in the present period of "calm."

At such a time local attacks and raids have particular importance. By "raid" is meant a foray into the enemy's lines, the object of which is not the capture of territory, however insignificant, but the taking of prisoners and, as an invariable side issue, the bombing and destruction of dugouts. The essential purpose of a raid is to acquire information. The nature and position of the enemy defenses are carefully noted, and the examination of prisoners permits the identification of the divisions opposite and often affords priceless information. Local attacks serve the same purpose, but their principal objective is the seizure of a certain position whose possession by the enemy might facilitate a subsequent attack, or whose occupation by the Allies would aid the operations of defense. Present conditions lend themselves to this incessant minor warfare.

A group of newly captured German prisoners said that few trenches were being constructed on their side. The first line was formed by a chain of holes—made by shells or dug for the purpose—held by a few men with rifles and mitrailleuses. Barbed wire, the simplest yet the most difficult of all obstacles to an infantry advance, was employed comparatively little, and it was not impossible for a party of as-

HOLD ENEMY ON MILE FRONT

REPULSED SOUTH OF YPRES

Their Local Attack North of Kemmel Breaks Down Before French Defense.

LONDON, May 14.—Two German attacks, both failures, are noted in the night bulletin issued by the British War Office.

Southwest of Morlancourt, east of Amiens, the enemy this morning opened an intense bombardment on a front of nearly a mile, and followed it up with an assault which at one point gained a footing in the British line, but was repulsed elsewhere with heavy losses. Counterattacking immediately, Australian troops ejected the Germans and completely re-established the British positions. More than fifty Germans were taken prisoners. The British casualties are reported to have been very light.

North of the village of Kemmel, on the Ypres front, French troops last night broke up a local German attack.

A press dispatch, which evidently refers to the same engagement, indicates that the assailants gained a temporary footing on the slopes of Hill 44.

The text of Field Marshal Haig's night report reads:

This morning, after heavy artillery preparation, the enemy attacked on a front of nearly a mile southwest of Morlancourt and succeeded at one point in entering our positions. At all other points the attack was repulsed with heavy loss to him, and in this one locality an immediate counterattack by Australian troops drove out the enemy and completely re-established our line. We captured over fifty prisoners, and our casualties were very light.

Local fighting occurred last night north of Kemmel, where the enemy attacked in the direction of Kleine Vierstraat and was repulsed by the French troops.

On the remainder of the front there is nothing to report.

Following is the text of the day bulletin:

We carried out a successful raid last night northeast of Robecq (Flanders) and captured a few prisoners without casualties to ourselves. A party of the enemy which attacked one of our posts west of Merville was repulsed with loss.

The hostile artillery was active during the night in the Somme and Ancre sectors.

An official statement on aerial operations tonight says:

Flying was possible only for a few hours Monday during the early part of the day and 500 bombs were dropped on various targets. Two hostile machines were brought down in air fighting. None of ours is missing.

German Attack on Hill 44.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, May 14, (Associated Press.)—Hill 44, a small but important elevation near the Vyverbeek River, north of Kemmel, about which such sanguinary conflicts have been waged since May 8, appeared today to be in the hands of the Germans again. The enemy began an assault yesterday morning and gained a hold on this position, and at latest reports was still clinging tenaciously to the slopes, although the hard-hitting French had been pressing the assailants vigorously.

Hill 44 has been one of the most hotly contested points on the northern battlefield.

Yesterday morning the enemy carried out a local bombardment about the hill, and followed this by a determined attack. The French opposed strenuous resistance, but the persistent Germans kept pressing forward slowly in the face of heavy machine gun and rifle fire, until they secured a footing on the hill. The fighting was still going on today.

The Germans southwest of Morlancourt, on the southern battlefront, picked a quarrel with the British this morning and got the worst of it. In the early hours the enemy attempted a raid into the lines of the British fighters, who made a field day of it. Forty-eight of the raiders remained behind to grace the prisoners' cage, and large numbers of their less fortunate comrades lay dead in front of the British positions at the end of the engagement. The British casualties were very light.

There has been considerable artillery activity at various points along the front, but nothing big in the way of infantry actions had been reported up to midafternoon.

FRESH TROOPS FOR GERMANS.

New Divisions and More Guns Preparing for Another Blow.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY, May 13, (Associated Press.)—The Germans are preparing most methodically for the resumption of their offensive. Signs seem to show that they will attack between La Bassée and the front south of Amiens, but it is also probable they will execute secondary operations simultaneously in Flanders, between Montdidier and Noyon, and possibly on other parts of the front, in the hope of attracting the allied reserves away from the centre.

It is regarded as possible that these lesser assaults will be delivered before the principal attack. Wherever the Germans decide to engage in battle, however, they will find facing them French, British, and American troops ready to meet the shock, in whatever strength it may be delivered.

The enemy's searchings for weakness in various parts of the allied lines has brought him only defeats, such as that southwest of Mailly Raineval on Saturday morning. The special shock battalion which the Germans threw in there left behind ninety-six prisoners, including an officer and fourteen noncommissioned officers, when it retired, beaten. The ground facing the position was covered with dead, almost the entire attacking party being destroyed.

In preparing for the next battle the Germans are reconstituting their used-up divisions and bringing up others which have not previously taken part in the great battle. They are also reinforcing their artillery powerfully and forming large supply dépots behind the lines.

For the present the German military authorities declare through the press that the delay in carrying out their plans is due to bad weather and the consequent condition of the ground, which has hindered their preparations. Undoubtedly they are waiting until everything is in the greatest state of readiness before making the attempt, on whose outcome so much depends for them, in view of their promises of a decisive victory to the German public.

BERLIN REPORTS A GAIN ON THE SOMME FRONT

"Successful Local Thrust" East of Amiens—Says British Givenchy Attacks Failed.

BERLIN, May 14, (via London.)—The official statement from General Headquarters this evening says:

A successful local thrust into the British lines on the north bank of the Somme was made on the Bray-Corbie road, [east of Amiens.] Vigorous counterattacks by the enemy failed.

Following is the text of the day report:

Strong British attacks during the evening were delivered against our positions north and south of Givenchy. They were repulsed with heavy losses.

On the fighting fronts there was increased firing activity during the early morning hours, which died down in the course of the afternoon. During the evening it revived several times. Reconnoitring activity remained lively.

In the other theatres there is nothing new.

Scatter German Concentrations in the Montdidier Region.

PARIS, May 14.—French batteries today dispersed German concentrations in the neighborhood of Montdidier and on the Noyon-Guiscard road. Intermittent bombardments occurred in the Grivesnes sector, northwest of Montdidier. A German surprise attack near Butte du Mesnil, in Champagne, was a complete failure.

Tonight's War Office bulletin says:

There were intermittent bombardments in the Grivesnes sector. Our batteries dispersed enemy concentrations and convoys in the neighborhood of Montdidier and on the road between Noyon and Guiscard.

In Champagne an enemy surprise attack in the region of Butte du Mesnil failed completely.

The text of the afternoon official announcement follows.

French patrols carried out operations north of Hangard, (on the front before Amiens,) near Courcy, and west of the Meuse, bringing back prisoners. We easily repulsed a German raid on small French posts northwest of Orvillers-Sorel.

The artillery fighting was rather spirited in Champagne, near Butte du Mesnil, and in the Vosges. A German local attack north of Le Fecht was repulsed by our fire.

There is nothing to report elsewhere.

GERMANS PROMISED TO BE IN CALAIS MAY 19

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, May 14 (Dispatch to The London Daily Mail.)—I can state on excellent authority that the German date for the occupation of Calais was until recently Whit Sunday, [May 19.]

This date was given so definitely that in certain circles it is still maintained that an effort must be made this week, "for the Germans must at least attempt to redeem this promise."

GERMAN LIE UNCOVERED.

Garbled Version of Lichnowsky Memorandum Circulated Abroad.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, May 14—(Dispatch to The London Daily Telegraph.)—The Corriere Della Sera learns from Zurich that many German agents, under the cloak of pro-Entente sympathies, are circulating throughout Switzerland copies of a garbled version of the Lichnowsky memorandum.

Some copies printed in the Italian language already have found their way into Italy, and it is understood the Germans also are circulating this garbled version in other Entente languages.

Philip Gibbs's Story of the Great Battle

shooting have been on the high ground on the British side of Albert, the Lens district, and the hills of Flanders, with harassing work on roads and dumps and camps. The British fire has been, on the whole, far greater and wider flung and all recent prisoners describe the heavy toll of life and limb which the British have taken of their strength. Many companies have lost 50 per cent. of their men in this way, and the German organization behind the lines has been badly broken.

Somme battlefields away beyond Albert are a quagmire again, as when last year the British had to struggle through them in the rains, and the Germans are experiencing some of the difficulties of getting their supplies over such ground. But they are not insuperable difficulties, and the next phase of the German offensive is only a postponement. If not prevented, it will come, I believe, very soon now, and its coming depends merely on the revised time table to which the enemy is working.

One thing he could never do now, and that is to divide the French and British armies, according to his first plan. He is too late for that. The French and British armies are closely mingled, interwoven with blue and brown from Flanders to the Somme. The two armies are in close comradeship and liaison, not only in the lines, but in fields and villages far behind. One sign of this brotherhood of arms I saw a day or two ago, and on other recent days.

In a field not far from the front, within sound and sight of the gun fire, there was a crowd of men massed in hollow square on each side of some goal posts. There was a football match between English and French infantry, and the onlookers were mixed with these two colors of earth and sky which symbolize their united strength, the British brown and the French blue, and the voices of the men mingled as they shouted and cheered.

Never to the end of the war now will the French and British be divided along the battle lines except by a field or two, and however strong the enemy's attack, he will not drive between them.

the Chief of the Imperial Staff, while I was in office. The Prime Minister made his speech on April 9. I was not, as has been stated in some reports of the speech, in the House on that occasion.

The day on which the Prime Minister spoke was also the day on which the enemy's attack in Flanders began. Between then and April 20, when I handed over my work to my successor, I was very much occupied with my duties, and was part of the time in France. I had no leisure to do more than glance at the Prime Minister's speech. I did notice the statement about the forces in Egypt and in Palestine, but that did not seem to me by itself to warrant my calling attention to it at a time when every one was very much occupied with other matters.

I left the War Office on April 20 on leave, and then for the first time read the full report of the speech. While I was on leave I heard of Bonar Law's answers to the questions in the House on April 23. I returned to London on April 29 by arrangement to make my official farewell at the War Office, and afterward saw the Hansard report for April 23. It was then, on April 29, and not till then, that I formed a definite opinion that Bonar Law's replies and those statements of the Prime Minister which I have questioned, taken together, put upon the soldiers a responsibility which in my judgment should be borne by the Ministers, and it appeared to me a matter of urgency to correct that impression. As the Prime Minister indicated in his speech of May 9, [Hansard, Vol. 105, p. 2,348, line 13 et seq.], I wrote the next day, April 30, after I had left the office, to my late Chief of the Imperial Staff, pointing out that the statements which I quoted in my letter of May 6 were incorrect. I had not made up my mind before then that action on my part was necessary. I waited for a reply until May 6 before sending my letter to the press, and that I conceived to be as long as I could wait, because I had been warned to expect orders to go to France on or after May 10, and I did not wish to make such charges on the eve of leaving the country, as suggestions have been made that I was working in concert or collusion with other soldiers or with opponents of the Government in Parliament or in the press.

I wish to add that I acted entirely alone and that the responsibility for what I did is mine alone. Nothing was further from my mind than to serve any partisan political purpose.

MAURICE ARTICLE CIRCULATED.

London Wonders Whether Chronicle Has Turned Against Government.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, May 15.—The Daily Chronicle circulated General Maurice's statement to the whole English press, irrespective of party affiliations. This fact created no little excitement in journalistic circles. The Chronicle has been a supporter of the Lloyd George Government during periods when his tenure of power has been so much in the balance that one sheet or two might have turned the scale.

Speculation turned on the point whether The Chronicle had engaged Maurice's services simply because of his qualifications for military correspondence, or whether his engagement indicated that The Chronicle in some measure espoused his side in the controversy with the Prime Minister.

On this question, which may very well be critical for the Lloyd George Government, it is of interest to note The Chronicle's leading article. In part it reads:

"Lloyd George laid stress on Maurice not having been present in the Versailles Council Chamber when the question of extending the British line was discussed. General Maurice had never claimed that he was, but he now makes it plain that he was in the very closest touch with the council's sittings.

"Another matter is the Prime Minister's complaint that General Maurice deferred his criticisms so long, and then made them in the newspapers. Lloyd George did not say, but it was currently reported in the lobby and widely accepted as a statement of fact that General Maurice was actually present and heard the speech of April 9.

"This, it will be seen, General Maurice entirely denies, and he gives some substantial reasons why the cumulative effect of the ministerial statements did not make its full impression on him immediately. But it made it some time before his letter appeared in the press, and in fact he wrote to the chief of the Imperial General Staff about it a week before.

"On this point the Prime Minister last Thursday was guilty, no doubt unwittingly, of a rather serious suppression. He told the House that he had specially inquired whether General Maurice had made representations to the Chief of the General Staff and found that until he left office, during the whole of the time that these questions were being discussed, he never made any.

"That was true, but only the half truth, and it is certainly unfortunate that the Prime Minister, whose special inquiries must have elicited the fact, did not go on to say that General Maurice, as soon as he left office, did make the very representations in question, and made them a week before his letter appeared in the newspapers."

General Maurice's personal explanation is published also in The Morning Post, The Daily News, and Daily Graphic. The Times prints only a sixteen-line summary, all without comment. The statement does not appear in The Daily Mail, Daily Telegraph or Daily Express, which papers either did not receive or did not publish Maurice's letter of May 6.

DENIES THAT OUR ARMY WON'T BE USED AT ONCE

British Government Says Ottawa Statement Was Due to "Error in Compilation."

OTTAWA, May 14.—The statement that it had been decided not to use American forces in France until they had become a "complete, powerful, self-supporting American army," was incorrect and "due to an error in compilation," according to a statement received from the British Government by the Canadian Government and made public today as "official news."

The reference which is now corrected was contained in a summary of operations on the British front made public here last Sunday night as coming from the War Committee of the British Cabinet. The statement from the British Government given out today says that, owing to the error in compilation, it was not made clear that the reference "related to the period when America first joined the war and had no relation to present events whereby the American Army is being brigaded with the Entente Armies."

The statement from the British Government follows:

"War Office summary—A correction should be made in the weekly circular telegram dated May 9th, summarizing operations to May 9th, the text of which read, 'Entente so confident that, given choice of small immediate American army for defense or waiting till reinforced by complete, powerful, self-supporting army, have chosen latter.' Owing to an error in compilation, it was not made clear that this related to the period when America first joined the war and had no relation to present events, whereby the American army is being brigaded with the Entente armies."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The British Embassy today issued a supplementary statement in even stronger denial than yesterday of the unauthorized announcement from Ottawa that the American army would not be employed until it reached greater dimensions. The embassy's announcement follows:

"Lord Reading has received official information that the telegram sent through Ottawa did not emanate from the British War Cabinet and is totally at variance with their views. Lord Reading is officially informed that the statement contained in it was made without any knowledge of the Prime Minister or the British Cabinet."

BAKER REASSURES MOTHERS

Their Boys Abroad Living Clean Lives and Well Cared For in Camp.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—American mothers were told that they may be proud of the conduct of their boys with the army overseas by Secretary Baker, in a speech tonight before the National Conference of the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense. In the audience were the President and Mrs. Wilson, Secretary and Mrs. Daniels, and many others prominent in public life.

"From the time I landed to the day I left," Secretary Baker said, "I never saw an American soldier living a day's life which he would not willingly have lived under his mother's eyes."

Living conditions at the front are far better than it is believed, Mr. Baker declared. Facilities for feeding the troops are ample, and a perfect supply system has been established to insure an uninterrupted flow of food and clothing necessities to the men in the field.

Describing the morale of Pershing's army, the Secretary said since landing on French soil the men have a new flush on their cheeks and a new light in their eyes.

JUNKERS AGAIN REJECT EQUAL VOTE

Government Measure Beaten on Third Reading, But Ministry Will Not Resign.

CRISIS ONLY POSTPONED

Fear That Government Eventually Will Yield and Kaiser's Promise of Franchise Reform Lost to Prussia.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, May 14.—The Prussian junkers have again voted down their King and their Parliament. It will be remembered that last July William II. promised Prussia a franchise reform based on equal suffrage. When the measure, which was to give effect to the royal promise, was brought before the committee of the Prussian lower house the reactionaries deleted the one-man one-vote clause. On a second reading the other day the chamber refused by a majority of over 50 to restore it, and today that reactionary destructiveness was ratified by an almost similar majority, 236 to 185, on the third reading.

The decision is a severe defeat for the Prussian Government, but it appears determined to act in its usual weak-kneed fashion. After the second reading defeat, the Government declared that it would take no action, that it would not decide whether to resign or dissolve the chamber till the third reading. Now it again postpones action till the now useless measure comes back from the upper house. Then, according to Dr. Friedberg, Deputy Minister of State, will come "the real drama."

Berlin political circles, however, expect nothing but an unheroic melodrama of giving way to the junkers. The Vorwärts and other democratic organs, anticipating what happened today, were badly depressed yesterday, but the majority Socialist mouthpiece will have something to cheer it up today. That is the remarkable result of the Reichstag by-election in the Zwickau, Saxony, division. The seat was held by a well-known Socialist, Wilhelm Stoll, from 1890 till his recent death. He received 27,846 votes out of 45,994 at the last general election in 1912, and when the split came in the Socialist ranks he went over to the independents.

The result of yesterday's decisive contest was that Richard Meier, a majority Socialist, won the seat with 12,405 votes. Fritz Heckert, Independent Socialist, received 4,826, and Louis Klag, a conservative, running for obvious reasons in an industrial constituency as "the representative of the national workers," 4,792. Thus the majority Socialist has a majority of 2,787 over both opponents. This is a serious blow for the Independent Socialists and a corresponding encouragement for Scheidemann's party.

AMSTERDAM, May 14.—On the third reading of the Franchise Reform bill in the Prussian Lower House yesterday Herr Friedberg, Vice President of the Ministry of State, said that the Government was inclined to an adjustment on the basis of equal suffrage, within certain limits, says a Berlin dispatch today. He adduced as proof of this the statement that the Government agreed to the "safeguarding" motions. (It has been charged that at least some of these "safeguarding" proposals have been advanced by opponents of the whole measure with the idea of negativing the reforms.)

On a vote taken upon the safeguarding motions proposed by the Centre Party these were rejected.

Herr Friedberg said that if the bill were rejected that would not end the matter, but the real drama would then begin.

The bill concerning the composition of the upper house was accepted as a whole.

Advices from Berlin today say it is evident that the German Government does not intend to come to any decision regarding the dissolution of the Prussian Diet until the Suffrage bill returns from the upper house, three weeks hence. The Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung points out that the lower house then will have to vote again on the bill. The newspaper says that the question whether the lower house at that time will take a different view as the result of the decision reached by the upper house cannot be discussed today with definiteness.

Paragraph 3 was the most important part of the Prussian franchise reform measure, as it provided for one vote for each man in Prussia, thus prohibiting plural voting as well as giving universal male suffrage. This paragraph was deleted from the measure in committee a fortnight ago. Premier von Hertling of Prussia is reported to have been empowered by the Kaiser to dissolve the Diet in case it refused to pass the bill.

ing raiders to penetrate the line under cover of darkness.

On the courage and initiative of these little groups may depend information that will decide the fate of the coming battle. The highly skilled French staff organizations can draw deductions of supreme importance from apparently trivial details. Miracles of courage and devotion are performed nightly in these operations carried out in cold blood by men who realize the danger to the full and know that their deeds will never be chronicled.

It is generally remarked by French officers that the American troops have shown splendid aptitude for this sort of fighting. What that augurs for the future may be judged from the remark of a Major of a famous French regiment to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent: "Each time a new draft comes to my battalion I try them out on night work and raids. When they have made good at that I know that I can depend on them for anything."

GERMANS EXPECTED THE RAID ON OSTEND

BRITISH HUNG FLARE SIGNAL

Motor Boat Set Light in Rigging of Sunken Sirius by Which the Vindictive Steered.

LONDON, May 14. — The Admiralty has issued the following graphic story of the Ostend operation:

"DUNKIRK, May 11.—The Sirius lies in the surf some 2,000 yards east of the entrance to Ostend Harbor, which she failed so gallantly to block, and when in the early hours of yesterday morning the Vindictive groped her way through the smoke screen and headed for the entrance, it was as though the old fighting ship awoke and looked on.

"A coastal motor boat had visited her and hung a flare in her slack and rusty rigging, and that eye of unsteady fire, paling in the blaze of star shells or reddening through the drift of smoke, watched the whole great enterprise from the moment when it hung in doubt to its ultimate triumphant success.

"The planning and execution of that success had been intrusted by Vice Admiral Sir Robert Keyes to Commodore Hubert Lynes, who directed the previous attempt to block the harbor with the Sirius and Brilliant. Upon that occasion a combination of unforeseen and unforeseeable conditions had fought against him.

"Upon this the main problem was to secure the effect of a surprise attack upon an enemy who was clearly, from his ascertained dispositions, expecting it. The Sirius and Brilliant had been baffled by the displacement of the Stroom Bank buoy, which marks the channel to the harbor entrance. But since then aerial reconnoissance had established that the Germans had removed the buoy altogether and that there were now no guiding marks of any kind.

"They had also cut gaps in the piers, as a precaution against a landing, and, further, when toward midnight on Thursday the ships moved from their anchorage it was known that some nine German destroyers were out and were at large upon the coast.

"The solution of the problem is best indicated by the chronicle of events. It was a night that promised well for the enterprise—nearly windless—and what little breeze stirred came a point or so west of north. The sky was lead blue, faintly star-dotted, with no moon, and a still sea for small craft, motor launches, and coastal motor boats, whose work was done close inshore.

"From the destroyer which served the Commodore for a flagship, the remainder of the force were visible only as silhouettes of blackness—the destroyers looming like cruisers in the darkness, the motor boats like destroyers, and the costal motor boats showing themselves as racing hillocks of foam.

"From Dunkirk a sudden brief flurry of gunfire announced that German airplanes were about. They were actually on the way to visit Calais, and over the invisible coast of Flanders the Summer lightning of 'reatless artillery rose and fell monotonously.

"'There's the Vindictive.' The muffled seamen and marines standing by the torpedo tubes and guns turned at that name to gaze at the great black ship seen mistily through the screening smoke from the destroyers' funnels, plodding silently to her goal and end. Photographs had made familiar that high-sided profile, her tall funnels with Zeebrugge scars, always with the background of the pier at Dover against which she lay to be fitted for her last task. Now was added to her the environment of night and sea and the greatness of the tragedy of her mission.

"She receded into the night astern, as a destroyer raced on to lay a lightbuoy that was to be her guide, and those on board saw her no more. She passed thence into the hands of the small craft, whose mission was to guide her, light her, and hide her in the clouds of a smoke screen.

"There was no preliminary bombardment of the harbor and batteries, as before the previous attempt. That was to be the first element in the surprise. A timetable had been laid down for every stage of the operation, and the staff work beforehand even included precise orders for laying the smoke barrage, with plans calculated for every direction of the wind.

"Monitors anchored in firing positions far seaward awaited the signal. The great sea batteries of the Royal Marine Artillery in Flanders, among the largest guns that were ever placed on land mountings, stobd by likewise to neutralize the big German artillery along the coast, and the airmen who were to collaborate with an aerial bombardment of the town waited somewhere in the darkness overhead. Destroyers patrolled seaward of the small craft.

"The Vindictive, always at that solemn gait of hers, found the flagship's lightbuoy and bore up for where a coastel motor boat, commanded by Lieutenant William R. Slayter, was waiting by calcium flare upon the old position of the Stroom Bank Buoy.

"Four minutes before she arrived there, and fifteen minutes only before she was due at the harbor mouth, the signal for the guns to open was given. Two motor boats, under command of Lieutenant Albert L. Poland, dashed in toward the ends of the high wooden piers and torpedoed them. There was a machine gun on the end of the western pier, and that vanished in a roar and leap of flames—which called to the guns.

"Over the town a flame suddenly appeared high in the air and sank slowly earthward—the signal that the airplans had seen and understood. Almost coincidentally with their first bombs came the first shells, whopping up from the monitors at sea. The surprise part of the attack was sprung. The surprise, despite the Germans' watchfulness, seems to have been complete.

"The motor launches were doing their work magnificently. These pocket warships, manned by officers and men of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve, are specialists at smoke production. They built to either hand of the Vindictive's course the likeness of a dense sea mist, driving landward with the wind. Star shells paled and were lost as they sank in it; the beams of searchlights seemed to break off short upon its front. It blinded the observers in the great batteries, which suddenly, upon the warning of the explosions of guns, roared into action.

"There was a while of tremendous uproar. The coast about Ostend is ponderously equipped with batteries, each with a name known and identified as von Tirpitz, von Hindenburg, Deutschland, Cecilia, and the rest. They register from six inches to monsters of fifteen-inch naval pieces in land turrets, and the Royal Marine Artillery fights a warlong duel with them. These now opened fire into the smoke and over it at the monitors and marines. And the monitors replied.

"Meanwhile the airplanes were bombing methodically, and anti-aircraft guns were searching the skies for them. Star shells spouted up and floated down, lighting the smoke banks with spreading green fires, and those strings of luminous green balls, which the airmen call 'flaming onions,' soared up to lose themselves in the clouds.

"Through all this stridency and blaze of conflict the old Vindictive, still unhurrying, was walking the lighted waters toward the entrance. It was then that those on the destroyers became aware that what seemed to be merely smoke was wet and cold, that the rigging was beginning to drip, and that there were no longer any stars. A sea fog had come on.

Dense Fog and Smoke.

"The destroyers had to turn on their lights and use their sirens to keep in touch with each other. The air attack was suspended, and the Vindictive, with some distance yet to go, found herself in gross darkness. There were motor boats on either side of her escorting her to the entrance. These were supplied with what are called Dover flares, enormous lights capable of illuminating square miles of sea. At once every pistol was fired as a signal to light these, but the fog and smoke together were too dense for even the flares.

"The Vindictive then put her helm over and started to cruise to find the entrance. Twice she must have washed across and at the third turn, upon reaching the position at which she first lost her way, there came a rift in the mist, and she saw the entrance and the piers on either side and an opening dead ahead.

"The inevitable motor boat U. B. 22, commanded by Acting Lieutenant Guy L. Cockburn, raced on into the opening under heavy and momentarily growing fire and planted a flare on the water between the piers. The Vindictive steamed over it and on. She was in.

"The guns found her at once. She was hit every few seconds after she entered, her scarred hull broken afresh in a score of places, her decks and upper works swept by machine guns. The machine gun at the end of the western pier had been put out of action by a motor boat's torpedo, but from other machine guns at the inshore end of the pier, from a position on the front, and from machine guns apparently firing over the eastern pier, there converged upon her a hail of lead.

Control Smashed by Shell.

"After her control was demolished by a shell which killed all the occupants, including Sub-Lieutenant Angus H. Maclach, who was in command of it, the upper and lower bridges and the chartroom swept by bullets, Commander Godsal ordered the officers to go with him to the conning tower. They observed through the observation slit in the steel wall of the conning tower that the eastern pier was breached some 200 yards from the seaward end, as though at some time a ship had been in collision with it. They saw the front of the town silhouetted again and again in the light of the guns that blazed at them. The night was a patchwork of fire and darkness.

"Immediately after passing the breach in the pier Commander Godsal left the conning tower and went on deck, the better to watch the ship's movements. He chose a position and called in through the slit of the conning tower his order to starboard the helm. The Vindictive responded and laid her battered nose to the eastern pier and prepared to swing her 320 feet of length across the channel.

"It was at that moment that a shell from the shore batteries struck the conning tower. Lieutenant Sir John Alleyne and Lieutenant V. A. C. Crutchley were still within. Commander Godsal was close to the tower outside. Lieutenant Alleyne was stunned by the shock. Lieutenant Crutchley shouted through the slit to the commander, and, receiving no answer, rang for port engine full speed astern to help the swinging ship. By this time she was lying at an angle of about 40 degrees to the pier and seemed to be hard fast, so it was impossible to bring her further around.

"After working the engines some minutes to no effect, Lieutenant Crutchley gave the order to clear the engine room and abandon ship, according to the program previously laid down. Engineer Lieutenant Commander William A. Bury, who was the last to leave the engine room, blew the main charges by a switch installed aft. Lieutenant Crutchley blew the auxiliary charges in the forward six-inch magazine from the conning tower.

"Those on board felt the old ship shrug as the explosive tore the bottom plates and bulkheads from her. She sank about six feet and lay upon the bottom of the channel. Her work was done.

"It is to be presumed that Commander Godsal was killed by the shell which struck the conning tower. Lieutenant Crutchley, searching the ship before he left her, failed to find his body or that of sub-Lieutenant MacLachan in that wilderness of splintered wood and shattered steel.

Men Aboard the Vindictive.

"Engineer Lieutenant Commander Bury, who was severely wounded, had been in the Vindictive in the attack on Zeebrugge Mole. He had urged upon the Vice Admiral his claim to remain with her, with four engine room artificers, in view of his and their special knowledge of her engines. The names of these four are A. Cavanagh, H. M. S. Vindictive, wounded; M. Carrol, Royal Naval Barracks, Chatham, wounded; A. Thomas, H. M. S. Lion, missing, and H. Harris, H. M. S. Royal Sovereign.

"The coxswain was a first-class petty officer, J. J. Reed, Royal Naval Barracks, Chatham, who had been with Commander Godsal in the Brilliant, and whose urgent request that he be allowed to remain with him had been granted. The remainder of the crew were selected from a large number of volunteers from the ships of the Dover patrol.

"Most of the casualties were incurred while the ship was being abandoned. The men behaved with just that cheery discipline and courage which distinguished them in the Zeebrugge raid. Petty Officer Reed found Lieutenant Alleyne in the coning tower still unconscious, and carried him aft under a storm of fire from machine guns. Lieutenant Alleyne was badly hit before he could be got over the side, and fell into the water. Here he managed to catch hold of a boat, and a motor launch, under Lieutenant Bourke, succeeded in rescuing him and two other wounded men.

"The remainder of the crew were taken off by a motor launch under Lieutenant Geoffrey H. Drummond under a fierce fire. When finally he reached the Warwick the launch was practically in a sinking condition. Her bows were shot to pieces. Lieutenant Drummond himself was severely wounded. His second in command, Lieutenant Gordon Ross, and one hand were killed. A number of others were wounded. The launch was found too damaged to tow. Day was breaking, and she and the Warwick were in easy range of the forts. As soon as her crew and the Vindictive survivors were transferred, a demolition charge was placed in her engine room and she was sunk.

Recall Rockets Sent Up.

"All was according to program. Recall rockets for the small craft were fired from the flagship at 2:30 A. M. Great red rockets whizzed up, to lose themselves in the fog. They could not have been visible half a mile away, but the work was done, and one by one the launches and motor boats commenced to appear from the fog and stopped their engines alongside. The destroyers exchanged news with them. There were wounded men to be transferred and dead men to be reported. But no one had seen a single enemy craft.

"Nine German destroyers which were out and free to fight chose the discreeter part.

"It is not claimed by the officers who carried out the operations that Ostend Harbor is completely blocked. But its purpose to embarrass the enemy and make the harbor impracticable to any but small craft and for dredging operations difficult has been fully accomplished. The position of the Vindictive is with stem on to the eastern pier, and not her stern, as shown in certain published illustrations."

The War Situation

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES

The most interesting news of yesterday is to be found, not in France, where the Allies are ready and poised for the next German blow, but in Mesopotamia, where the British are still keeping up their activity on a most rapid scale. On April 30, just two weeks ago, the British announced that they had reached Tuz Kermati on the Ak River, which is about half way between Bagdad and Mosul. A few days later they were at Kirkuk, about forty miles further on, and still in the direction of Mosul. Now they have announced that they have crossed the Zab River, twenty miles or so still further on, and again directly toward Mosul. In two weeks' time, then, they have covered about sixty miles of ground, driving the Turks before them. Nothing could show more clearly the utter demoralization of the Turkish Army. Having been defeated at every turn, they are now not merely retreating, but literally fleeing before the advancing British, failing even to check them at the river crossings, and falling back upon their great base at Mosul.

The Turks in the Near East appear to be in rather a bad situation. The Germans, needless to say, are very busy in France and in Russia. With the situation in Russia what it is and being further aggravated by the outrageous impositions of the German command, Germany will not dare withdraw any of her troops for service either in the east or west. The Turks are therefore thrust entirely upon their own resources except in Palestine. In that country there is, as far as we know, a single German division co-operating with the Turks in the defense of Aleppo. Aleppo is, of course, a vital nerve centre, as it tells the whole story of Turkish transportation. From Aleppo branches off to the north the railroad, still uncompleted where the Taurus mountains intervene, to Adana. Just north of Aleppo there branches off from this road the so-called Hamburg-Bagdad road, which runs, or will run, through Mosul when completed. At present the terminus is at Nesibin, about 110 miles from Mosul. This railroad is the key to the entire Turkish defense in Mesopotamia. Permit this road to be cut and what Turkish defense there is will entirely collapse.

With this situation in view, it is impossible that the German division in Palestine could detach itself from the defense of the Aleppo junction and come to the succor of the Turks further east. In the east, then, the Turks apparently must fight the game through alone. This they appear entirely unable to do. The British have captured or destroyed most of their artillery, and the British cavalry—for it is almost entirely a cavalry operation—has no opposition capable of holding it back. If it can get the supply columns up, there is no reason why it could not secure the base at Mosul in relatively short time.

The British are undoubtedly well equipped. It will be remembered that when this operation first started the British, in announcing the success of the initial move, stated that their forces had spent the period of inactivity in reorganization and re-equipment. This meant that they had accumulated at advanced bases a store of supplies sufficient to permit them to maintain a continued operation. They should be able, therefore, to push matters for some time to come before having to halt for supplies to reach them. At the same time the rapidity of the British advance is carrying them daily further from their base, which is probably at Tekrit, on the Tigris, and in doing so are open to one danger. That danger is in the form of a flanking operation from the north by a Turkish raid through the mountains against their line of communications. This danger is not so great now as it will be somewhat later, due to the fact that there are no roads through the mountains until Nesibin is reached. The British, moreover, are fully cognizant of the situation, and it may well be that in making the advance they have in mind the possible co-operation which the old Russian army of the Caucasus may be able to give.

There is, however, an element of great political importance in this fighting. In the treaty of peace—so called—between Germany and Russia, Turkey received the Black Sea port of Batum in Russian Armenia, as well as the three Armenian provinces. This cession practically passed to Germany a route to India provided these terms of the treaty should stand. This touched England in a very tender spot, and was not to be permitted for a moment. By forcing their way westward the British are making the Turkish hold on this new territory, and with it the German hold, a matter of short moment. Ultimate success will break off the new German route to India before it can be utilized, and at the same time restore Armenia to Russia, if, indeed, it is not made independent.

This general idea of the protection of India has been one of the main objects of the entire Mesopotamian activity. It has merely been emphasized in the past year, as the Russian defection brought Germany nearer to the gateway. Had Russia remained in the war, the probabilities are that the Turks would now be suing for peace. But, even with Russia out, they may still be driven behind the wall of the Taurus Mountains. As it is, the eastern fighting furnishes one of the most interesting phases of the war.

BRITISH CASUALTIES 41,612.

Believed to be Highest for England in Any Week of War.

LONDON, May 14.—The total of British casualties reported in the week ending today is 41,612. They are divided as follows:

Killed or died of wounds—Officers, 501; men, 5,065.

Wounded or missing—Officers, 2,123; men, 33,923.

Reports of British casualties usually are not available for some time after the actions in which they are sustained. The large total in the last week evidently represents losses suffered when the fighting in Flanders and Picardy was at its height. Complete records have not been given out, but probably the casualties reported in the last week are the heaviest British losses of any week of the war. The total last week was 38,691.

Lithuanians Here Say Their People at Home Will Never Consent to Such a Fate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Secretary Lansing today received from American Minister Morris at Stockholm an unconfirmed Swedish report that Germany had served an ultimatum on the Soviet Government demanding, among other things, the occupation of Moscow and other large Russian cities.

"Swedish press reports from Moscow," said the dispatch, "state that Count von Mirbach recently transmitted to the Commissariat of the People a note formulated as an ultimatum and demanding the immediate effecting of certain financial measures which would practically make Russia a German colony.

"The chief points of the note were the immediate solution of the question regarding the exchange of prisoners, the complete abolishment of armaments, and the dissolution of units formed recently; also the occupation of Moscow and some other large Russian cities."

No confirmation of this report, however, has been received by the State Department through any official source.

AMSTERDAM, May 14.—Emperor William has issued a proclamation concerning Lithuania in which he says it is assumed Lithuania will participate in the war burdens of Germany. The "independence" of Lithuania, allied with the German Empire, is recognized.

The proclamation, according to the Rheinische Westfälische Zeitung, carries the following preamble:

We, Wilhelm, by God's grace, German Emperor, King of Prussia, &c., hereby make known that whereas the Lithuanian Landsrat, as the recognized representative of the Lithuanian people, on Dec. 12 announced the restoration of Lithuania as an independent State allied to the German Empire by an eternal, steadfast alliance, and by conventions chiefly regarding military matters, traffic, customs, and coinage, and solicited the help of the German Empire; and,

Whereas, Further previous political connections in Lithuania are dissolved, we command our Imperial Chancellor to declare Lithuania on the basis of the aforementioned declarations of the Lithuania Landsrat, in the name of the German Empire, as a free and independent State, and we are prepared to accord the Lithuanian State the solicited help and assistance in its restoration.

We assume the conventions to be concluded will take the interests of the German Empire to account equally with those of Lithuania and that Lithuania will participate in the war burdens of Germany, which secured her liberation.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Emperor William's proclamation recognizing the independence of Lithuania, allied with the German Empire, was received today with no enthusiasm by officers at the Lithuanian National Council headquarters here.

"The assumption that Lithuania 'will participate in the war burdens of Germany' means a contribution of three things—money, munitions, and men," the officers declared. "The first we have not, as Germany has already impoverished us; the second we have no means of supplying, because fe lack the first. Therefore, Germany can have reference only to men. Men from a self-declared democracy to fight in the ranks of autocracy? Unthinkable! Lithuania would not consent. Are her citizens to be dragooned into the ranks of the Kaiser? This would be an abridgment of the sovereignty which Germany has already recognized, for Chancellor Hertling's reply stated, 'We hereby recognize Lithuania as free and independent.'

"The truth of the matter is that the dilemmatic horns between which Germany now finds herself project from the head of her own minotaur. She knows that ultimate defeat is unavoidable, but she would compensate losses in the west with gains in the east, among which Lithuania is gambled on as an asset. No recognition of Lithuanian independence can be sincere when coupled with the von Hertling terms, but if this sop will add to Prussian man power, it may postpone somewhat the inevitable day of reckoning and give her more time to Germanize the east, with a view of confederating the new republics under Junker rule.

"Doubtless the Kaiser believes himself divinely anointed with authority to perform this sort of emancipation. Attila labored under similar delusions. If Germany has suddenly repented and is possessed of a sincere desire to render us assistance, an indemnity for property destroyed by her armies, and for the pillage and looting which they have visited on Lithuania, aggregating billions of dollars, will be the most practical earnest of her proposed good offices."

CHICAGO, May 14.—C. Jirgelio, Vice President of the Lithuanian Workers' Council of America, an organization of 50,000 members pledged to work for the independence of Lithuania, asserted today that the present demands of Germany on that country were the result of a plot of Lithuanian clericals.

"The Kaiser's demand for power from Lithuania will be resisted to the last by the Lithuanian people, for the clerical party in Lithuania is not a popular one," he said.

GRIP OF GERMANY ON RUSSIA TIGHTENS

Capture of Rostov Gives Her Control of Grain, Coal, Iron and Oil Regions.

MOSCOW, May 10. (Associated Press.)—Through the capture of Rostov-on-Don the Germans have gained control of the Caucasus, the grain districts in the Donetz Basin and the coal, iron and oil fields. Northern Russia is now cut off from the Caucasus, excepting for a single railroad running through Tsaritsin, in the southern part of the Government of Saratov, which the Germans are now threatening.

Coupled with the fall of Sebastopol and the overthrow of the Ukraine Rada and the establishment in the Ukraine of a bourgeois Government wholly under German domination, the capture of Rostov-on Don has created great uneasiness in Moscow and Petrograd. A German advance in Central Russia is generally feared, and the removal of the capital to Yekaterinburg in the Ural Mountains is being discussed.

Germany's overthrow of the Ukraine Government, with which it had made peace, is regarded by North Russia as a step toward its occupation. Within a few weeks the future of Petrograd and Moscow probably will be determined, as it is considered that the Soviet Government either must submit to German domination or retreat eastward and prepare for a defense against the invadcrs.

Effective resistance will be difficult without outside assistance, because of the lack of technical experts and supplies. The bitter feeling against Germany is intensified by the ruthless seizures in Ukraine, and a growing disposition to accept allied aid if the Entente Allies will recognize the Bolshevist Government is evident.

AMSTERDAM, May 14.—The Täglische Rundschau of Berlin says that M. Dobry, Director of the Ukrainian Bank, who was arrested at the time the former Ukrainian Government was overthrown, has been appointed Ukrainian Minister of Finance.

FINNS PUT TO DEATH 500 RUSSIAN CAPTIVES

Report That 25,000 Finnish Red Guard Prisoners Are to Work in Germany.

MOSCOW, May 11, (Associated Press.)—An official statement issued here today declared that after the occupation of Tammerfors, Finland, by the Finnish White Guard five hundred Russian officers and men were shot.

The Russians, it is declared, were taken to the Municipal Theatre at night. The next morning they were brought out in groups of fity, lined up and mowed down with machine guns.

The statement also contains a report on the battle fought near Lahti, (the engagement reported by Berlin to have resulted in the overwhelming defeat of the Red Guard, in which 20,000 of the Red Guard forces were taken prisoners, early this month.) The statement describes the engagement as a desperate and bloody one and declares the White Guards and the Germans lost about 4,000 killed. Many civilians, it is stated, were killed by the German bombardment.

LONDON, May 14.—The Swedish newspaper Dagens Nyheter, a copy of which has been received here, contains an article reproducing statements made to the writer by a French officer who was in Tammerfors, Finland, at the time of its capture by the White Guard.

This officer stated definitely that all Russians were taken out of the ranks of the prisoners and summarily shot without trial or inquiry of any kind, and that he himself saw about sixty Russians put to death in this way. He added that he had been informed that warning had been issued beforehand of the treatment which would be accorded Russians found fighting with the Red Guard.

Commenting on this matter, the Social Demokraten of Stockholm observes that no blame attaches to the Finnish people for their insufficient knowledge of international law, but that this ignorance does not relieve them of the obligation of common humanity.

The newspaper adds that it has also been reported on good authority that 25,000 Finnish Red Guard prisoners are to be sent to Germany at the request of the Germans, where they will work as a labor contingent, and that the White Guard regards this plan with great favor and as an easy way to avoid internal troubles.

GERMAN ATROCITIES STIR RUSSIANS

Villages Plundered and Burned and the Inhabitants Slain or Tortured.

LONDON, May 14.—A Russian Government wireless received here today reveals the full horror of the German atrocities in the occupied regions of White Russia. It says that trustworthy witnesses, who produced documentary evidence, told of the violence of the pogroms and of the tortures, executions and savage methods of dealing with the working classes, as well as the plundering and burning of Russian villages by German detachments.

"In the Bobrinsk district," the dispatch says, "entire villages have been set afire and plundered. In the village of Buda a Uhlan patrol extorted a contribution of several thousand rubles, and when the peasants had paid part of it and were unable to pay more, the Uhlans surrounded the village and bombarded it.

"In other villages peasants, women, and children, who endeavored to escape from fires were pursued by Uhlans and cut to pieces with swords or flogged with whips. In one village an old Jew was first flogged and then hanged in the presence of all the villagers. Most savage acts were perpetrated in Jewish villages. All persons suspected of belonging to the Bolsheviki and those in military uniforms were immediately shot.

"A further group of facts concerns violence done by the White Guard, allies of the German authorities, to the Russian inhabitants of Finland, especially in Viborg. Even twelve-year-old children have been shot. At Viborg one witness saw two hundred corpses, mainly Russian officers and mere schoolboys. According to other witnesses more than six hundred persons were executed in two days."

REDS FIGHT ANARCHISTS.

Bombs and Machine Guns Used in Fierce Battle at Moscow.

MOSCOW, May 12, (Associated Press.)—Fighting began last night in the centre of the city between Bolshevist troops and anarchists. The Soviet troops surrounded the anarchist headquarters, over which a black flag was flying, and fired on the flag. The anarchists replied with grenades and machine guns.

Similar fights occurred on other streets. One of the groups, known as the "Anarchist Federalists," who were using bombs, showed the white flag after a half hour's fighting.

At noon today fighting was still in progress.

DERIDES TALK OF MONARCHY.

Bolshevist Minister to Germany Says the Thing Is Unthinkable.

AMSTERDAM, May 14.—The return of the monarchy in Russia is unthinkable, Adolph Joffe, Russian Ambassador at Berlin, declared in a recent interview given to Dr. Friedberg, the Berlin correspondent of the Vienna Neues Journal. Incidentally M. Joffe characterized any assertion that Americans "during the war or during the revolution, received any concessions from Russia" as a "pure invention."

On his main topic of the governmental prospects in Russia M. Joffe admitted that a Government of non-Socialists, "under artificial conditions," was within the range of possibility, but never a return to the rule of an Emperor.

"There is today," he continued, "no power in Russia strong enough to upset us. Behind us stands the great mass of the peasants and workers—all those whom the capitalistic system had not blessed with this world's goods. The lower bourgeois strata is also coming over to us. The people recognize that Milukoff and his friends are useless, and that the Menshevikі and the Kerensky Socialists have turned out to be a failure. There is only one group left, namely, the anarchists, but they lack political driving force.

"Oh, yes," exclaimed the Minister, "they criticise us, too, in Russia. People whose affairs are not prosperous are apt to curse us, but after all they recognize that we are not responsible for the consequences of the war, and that our pronounced Socialist system is best adapted for Russian conditions.

"Our aim is to provide an abundance of those good things which mankind needs for the enjoyment of life. We are not ascetics. We do not want to return to primitive conditions. On the contrary, we wish to make people's lives richer and happier. We do not object to wealth for all, but we do object to the capitalism which dooms millions to misery so that the few may have luxury."

M. Joffe denied that there has been any split between Leon Trotzky, the Minister of War, and Premier Lenine, as has been reported. He also contradicted, the interviewer says, the widely held view that Great Russia was dependent upon the Ukraine for grain. The Siberian grain crop was available for export, he said, "and when our relations with the Central Powers are in proper shape we shall be quite able to ship grain to them, and likewise to ship metals. We also have great stocks of linen.

"What we need from Germany," continued M. Joffe, "are dyes, medicines, and agricultural machinery. We have not given Americans or other foreigners any mining, railway or other concession.

"We are not trying to compel Russians to return home, and we welcome the coming of foreigners. The latter will enjoy equal rights. We even favor suffrage for foreigners.

"Food conditions are not good in the towns, but there is plenty in Northern Russia. We are working hard to improve transportation. As to the exchange of prisoners, we are ready to accelerate it. It is to our own interest to do so."

M. Joffe, the interviewer reports, ended his talk by declaring that his personal relations with the German Government were "entirely correct."

BOLSHEVIKI IN MONGOLIA.

Red Troops Reported at Urga, 175 Miles Within Chinese Border.

LONDON, May 14.—Bolshevist troops have penetrated more than 150 miles south into Mongolia from the Siberian border below Ikurtsk, according to a dispatch filed on May 11 by The Daily Mail's correspondent at Tientsin.

The Chinese Resident-General at Urga, in Northern Central Mongolia, about 300 miles southeast of Irkutsk, has urgently telegraphed the Peking Government, says the correspondent, reporting the arrival of Bolshevist troops at Urga, nearly 175 miles inside Mongolian territory. The Mongolians, the Resident-General stated, were unable to resist the Bolsheviki, who had confiscated goods belonging to several wealthy Chinese merchants.

ARMENIANS ORGANIZE TO RESIST THE TURKS

Swear to Fight to the Death for Defense of Their Cause and Country.

LONDON, May 14.—It is learned from Armenian sources that everywhere in the Caucasus the Armenians are organizing in order to resist the attempted advance of the Turkish troops eastward. Telegraphic information from both Armenian and Turkish sources has announced from time to time that fighting has taken place between Armenian and Ottoman troops, and it appears clear that the Turkish march eastward has been considerably hindered.

In spite of enemy propaganda, and betrayal by the Tartars, the Armenians are determined to fight to the death for their national cause and the defense of their country. At an enthusiastic meeting held at Tiflis, the President of the Armenian Assembly, said:

"If we are to perish, let us perish with honor."

On the following day the Armenian trade unions passed a resolution that all able-bodied persons be enrolled, while the students and schoolboys also met and declared that the battlefield was the place where they would continue their studies.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 14, (via Amsterdam.) Ciscaucasia has proclaimed its independence. Its decision to assume the independent state has been communicated to the Central Powers and the neutrals.

The bulk of the European portion of the Russian province of the Caucasus is commonly known as Ciscaucasia. It lies on the northern slope of the Caucasus Mountain range and is included in the designation Transcaucasia. Thus the foregoing may be an echo from Turkish sources of the announcement made from Moscow on April 26 to the effect that Transcaucasia had proclaimed its independence and that a conservative Government was being formed there.

NEW AUSTRIAN ATTACKS ON MONTE CORNO FAIL

Lively Gun Duels on Various Italian Fronts—Austrians Lose Eleven Airplanes.

ROME, May 14.—The War Office announcement today reads:

Hostile attempts to renew the attacks on Monte Corno and to approach our lines at Dosso Casina and in the Balcino and Ornic valleys completely failed. Italian and British patrols raided the village of Pedescala and trenches in front of Ave, [Piave front], inflicting losses on the enemy.

There were more lively artillery duels in the Tonale region, [Trentino front], in the Lagarina Valley, on Monte Asolone and north of Monticlo.

Eleven hostile airplanes were brought down. British aviators successfully bombed enemy hutments near Asiago.

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, May 13, (Associated Press.)—Italian troops repulsed with heavy loss a desperate enemy attempt last night to redeem the loss of Monte Corno. It is believed that this was only the first of a series of efforts to regain the lost ground, owing to the value of the height, which commands the approaches to the valley leading from Trent to Rovereto.

The fight last night was in the darkness and was a bloody hand-to-hand struggle over the rocky slopes of the mountains. The Italian positions, however, were maintained intact.

Thus far the fighting around Monte Corno has been of local character and not a part of any general offensive, although the outposts show increasing activity all along the mountain front.

BINDS ITALY TO US.

Red Cross Work, Says Mr. Page, Interprets America to Her Ally.

ROME, May 14.—What the American Red Cross has done for the Italian Army and civilians in furthering the good relations between Italy and the United States is the topic of a statement issued by Thomas Nelson Page, the American Ambassador.

"The American people are entitled to know the results of my observations of the work of the American Red Cross in Italy," says the Ambassador. "I have watched it during the last year with keen interest and have been delighted. The Red Cross has brought practical aid to the army, to refugees, to children, to suffering soldiers, and to their families.

"But above all has been the spirit in which the work has been done. The money spent and the supplies distributed have been useful beyond estimate, but the spirit in which the Red Cross has done its work has seemed to me an interpretation to Italy of America as she really is. I believe the work is of the greatest importance, both in the present and for the future, and is drawing the two peoples closely together."

CAILLAUX IN COURT; SPIRIT UNBROKEN

Called as Witness in Bonnet Rouge Affair, He Seeks to Plead His Own Case.

ENTERS LIKE A DICTATOR

Ex-Premier, Kept to the Issue, Says He Never Heard of Banker Marx Till July, 1917.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 14.—For the first time since his arrest over two months ago on charges of treason, Paris saw today ex-Premier Joseph Caillaux, who for several years was undoubtedly the most powerful and, in the opinion of many, the most dangerous public man in France whether in or out of office, make his appearance in public. He was called as a witness in the Bonnet Rouge trial.

Caillaux entered the room in which the court-martial sat with his head high and lacking not a jot of the characteristic arrogance and pride which led him to claim the right to be the dictator of his country's fate and which brought him to his present position. The prisoner is awaiting trial by a military court on the gravest charges that can be laid against a politician His evidence was unimportant in itself and the whole interest in his appearance was purely personal.

It was evident from the man's whole manner that confinement in a prison cell and the long investigation he has undergone have not in the slightest degree diminished his fighting power. He marched in surrounded by armed guards with the air of a dictator in the midst of his escort of honor. His answers were given with complete assurance and a steady gaze at the President of the court-martial which marked him as a man entirely without fear, who was prepared to fight to the end. With all the personal force with which he has often faced and quelled an antagonistic chamber he attempted more than once to get outside the narrow limits of the question on which he had been called with a view to express for the benefit of the greater audience in the country at large some part of his own defence against the charges of treason, and it was only the firmness of the President of the court-martial which kept him from making use of the court as a personal platform.

Caillaux's appearance today gave a foretaste of the remarkable experiences which are in store for a day in the near future when he himself will appear as a prisoner before another military tribunal.

PARIS, May 14.—Former Premier Caillaux was brought into court from his prison cell today to testify in the treason trials growing out of the Bonnet Rouge affair. He was called at the request of counsel for M. Landau, one of the accused, who was a reporter for the Bonnet Rouge.

M. Caillaux at 9 o'clock entered the room in which the court-martial is sitting. The room was crowded. The former Premier apparently was in splendid health. His life in prison seemed to have agreed with him, as he looked better than at the time of his last appearance when Bolo Pacha was on trial.

Before M. Caillaux began his testimony Colonel Voyer, the presiding officer, admonished him to confine his remarks within the proper limits.

"The only point at issue," said Colonel Voyer, "is whether the witness mentioned the name of Marx of Mannheim (a German banker through whom funds were supplied for the Bonnet Rouge propaganda) to M. Landau in September, 1916. Please keep to that point."

M. Caillaux denied emphatically that he had mentioned Marx in 1916. He said he had never heard of the man until July, 1917, and then only when the Bonnet Rouge case was discussed in the Chamber of Deputies. It was brought out that the name and address of Marx were found on a slip of paper among the documents belonging to M. Caillaux which were discovered at Florence. The former Premier explained this by saying the paper was handed to him by a Swiss merchant, who was introduced to him under the pretext that he was to speak about the exchange of merchandise between France and Switzerland.

"I dismissed him brutally," declared M. Caillaux.

Colonel Voyer evidently was anxious to have M. Caillaux conclude his testimony.

"That is a sufficient answer," he said. "You may go."

M. Caillaux insisted on speaking further, however, saying:

"I have never given one franc to The Bonnet Rouge since the war began. It is true that I subscribed 40,000 francs before the war, but this fund was exhausted at the beginning of hostilities. At the time I was engaged in defending my honor against a bitter press campaign. The Bonnet Rouge defended me, and, therefore I helped it. I have defended my honor in the past, and will do so in the future, with all possible means at my command."

M. Caillaux's voice rose to a high pitch and he exhibited emotion as he made this declaration. A ripple of applause broke out. It was suppressed quickly.

"It is my contention," he said, "that a public man in time of war must consider every possibility of bringing about a favorable peace, no matter whence it comes."

M. Caillaux's testimony seemed to be disturbing to the accuser, who immediately began to attempt to shift the responsibility upon each other.

MEAT CARD SYSTEM STARTED IN PARIS

People Good-Naturedly Accept, Forming in Lines Before the Butcher Shops.

PARIS, May 14.—The application of the meat card system for the first time today caused confusion in certain quarters, but on the whole the system was successful, the public seemingly being content to accept the retrenchment with cheerful resignation in the interest of national defense.

Purchasers who went early to the shops were compelled to form in lines, because even the most experienced butchers found some difficulty in cutting the exact 200 grams of meat allowed each person and in extracting the bones. Numerous discussions arose, but these were of a good-natured character.

Fish prices rose during the day.

The public accepted the meat card system with greater complacency than did members of the Chamber of Deputies, who interpellated M. Boret, the Food Minister, continually at the afternoon session of the Chamber, criticising the adoption of the new system. Several of the Deputies asked the Minister to study the meat question further and to take measures to prevent abuses and to regulate requisitions. M. Boret adopted an attitude of "wait and see," declaring that the measures he had taken were in the best interests of France and her allies.

TO INCREASE FRENCH ARMY.

Government to Place Old Classes of Workmen at Foch's Orders.

PARIS, May 14.—The Government has decided to place at the disposal of the Commander in Chief all the mobilized workingmen belonging to the contingents of 1912, 1911, and 1910, and also some of the contingents of 1909 to 1903.

Allowance will be made for the time spent at the front and the wounds received.

dustry, which are considered harmful to Austrian interests, and also on account of the maintenance of the old commercial treaty between Austria-Hungary and Rumania, which is considered to be disadvantageous to Austria and to favor Hungary.

According to German newspapers, says an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Amsterdam, the Austro-German alliance was greatly strengthened by the meeting of the Emperors. A more intimate military co-operation among the Central Powers, Bulgaria and Turkey also was decided upon in principle, the newspapers report.

Old Alliance Tightened.

AMSTERDAM, May 14.—Austrian newspapers publish a statement, said to have emanated from an authoritative source, to the effect that the conference between Emperor William and Emperor Charles at German Great Headquarters last Sunday was intended to strengthen the old alliance, which was concluded as a defensive measure against Russia and to which added weight was given by the developments of the war.

"We were attacked and were obliged to defend ourselves against a world of enemies," says the statement. "Therefore we must adhere to the defensive alliance and extend and deepen it. This defensive alliance fits well into the alliance of peoples, which, as alleged, is the aim of the Entente. The alliance of peoples is meant to be a protection against future wars. The Dual Alliance has no aim in view other than protection against future wars."

The statement concludes:

"It is obvious that when the renewal of the alliance is being discussed a series of questions of a political, military, and economic nature which are closely connected therewith also must be discussed."

BOHEMIAN WOMEN RIOT; FERMENT IS SPREADING

State of Siege in Prague Suburb—Czech Official Warns of Redistricting Policy.

LONDON, May 14.—A state of siege has been declared at Smichow, a suburb of Prague, Bohemia, and the troops have been sent away, an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Amsterdam reports.

One hundred and fifty women are said to have been arrested on account of the demonstrations. The Burgomaster has resigned. The ferment is extending through Bohemia, according to the dispatch.

Trouble broke out Sunday, when several hundred women assembled outside the residence of the Burgomaster and began smashing windows. Nineteen of the demonstrators were arrested and taken to Prague, whereupon 150 women marched to the city and demanded the release of the prisoners. They were immediately arrested and sent to prison for fourteen days without a trial.

AMSTERDAM, May 14.—Deputy Stamels, Vice President of the Czech League, according to a dispatch from Vienna, has declined an invitation of Dr. von Seidler, the Austrian Premier, sent to the Czech Club, to discuss the establishment of district administrators in Bohemia. The Czech Deputy warned the Premier regarding the consequences of this measure.

PRO-GERMAN PLEAS IN AUSTRIA

Newspaper Campaign Emphasizes Dual Monarchy's Dependence.

LONDON, May 3, (Associated Press.)—A vigorous newspaper campaign is in progress in Austria with the object of impressing on the non-German population of that country the absolute necessity of linking the destiny of Austria-Hungary with that of Germany.

Even independent papers such as the Zeit are pointing out with vigor that however much Austrians may feel inclined to resent manifestations of German arrogance and superiority, this is not the time to resent this tone, "which is part of the North German nature." It would be more to the purpose, says the Zeit, to recognize that without German backing there is but a poor prospect of Austria-Hungary cutting any important figure at the coming peace conference.

The Zeit points out with an air of resignation that the same holds good with regard to Austria's future economic development. The monarchy has been too heavily hit and its resources too far exhausted for thought of economic action apart from Germany. No extension of Austro-Hungarion territories into the Balkans is to be thought of without German co-operation, and even the thought that the result may be of more benefit to Germany than to Austria cannot prevent the conviction that there is no other way of meeting the situation than by co-operation.

"We shall be wise," says the Zeit, "if we learn much from Germany, and opportunity will dictate those subsequent actions on our part which will help us to be more independent in the future."

The Vienna Tageblatt, in an article along the same lines, says:

"Do not let us deceive ourselves. This tone of antagonism to Germany is heard in many places. There are vast bodies of our population who still fail to see any value in our alliance with Germany, and who, even after the evidence of the last four years of faithful friendship on the part of our ally, resent the intimate connection between us and our dependence bn one another.

"Is it not true, perhaps, that these people dislike Germany merely because of the good order which prevails there in contrast with the disorder which prevails in Austria? In Austria we have somehow come to view our social backwardness, our political disorder, as aesthetic values which cannot be too highly praised. We would do well to go to school to Germany. Germany is our true friend, even if she is not always a pleasant one. In Germany there is no jogging on in the old grove; there is no impressionism in German politics.

"Whatever people may say or think, Austria-Hungary's future is by the side of Germany. This cannot be avoided, no matted how much hatred we display, no matter how much we give utterance to our envy."

Rumania Must Sell to Germany.

AMSTERDAM, May 14.—A Vienna dispatch says that a special economic treaty between Rumania and the Central Empires provides that Rumania will sell to Germany and Austria-Hungary her surplus production in 1918 and 1919 of all kinds of grain, including oil seeds, and also fodder, pulse, poultry, cattle, fibrous plants, and wool. Rumania also agrees to sell this surplus to the Central Powers for a further period of seven years, if it should be required.

DEMAND

Take the man out of demand, and retail stores would lose only 15% of their sales. Woman does 85% of the purchasing and has an influence over 10% of the balance.

If you make an article used in a home, or an article worn by any member of the family; or, in fact, nearly any article except steam-shovels, the way to sell it is by advertising to the women. They are the "purchasing agents" for American homes, and 1,000,000 of them are influenced in their buying by what they see advertised in The Delineator.

Don't sell your Liberty Bond. Hold it "for the duration of the war," at least.

If you need money temporarily, borrow. You can get an advance of 90% of the market price.

If you must sell, insist on the market price. Baby Bonds can be sold at the $1,000 price plus interest and less, of course, a moderate service charge.

Don't exchange your Liberty Bond for any other securities.

If, as it is proper and should be profitable for you to do, you use your Liberty Bond as protection on the purchase of other investment securities, see that it keeps good company.

GERMAN TAXES FALL SHORT.

Extraordinary Defense Levy on Incomes Is Proposed.

AMSTERDAM, May 14.—A Berlin dispatch printed in the Cologne Gazette says that it is proposed by the German Imperial Government to impose a non-recurring extraordinary defense levy on account of the insufficient amount raised by indirect taxes.

This levy is expected to yield 1,200,000,000 marks, and will be obtained largely from taxing incomes. In Reichstag circles, the newspaper adds, the view prevails that if the Federal States intend to prevent the empire from levying direct taxes they must take a portion of the war debt on themselves and cover it by Federal taxes.

AMERICANS' ARRIVAL IN ZONE OF THE DRIVE

Officers and Men of Reconnoissance Detail Undisturbed by Heavy Fire.

JUDGE WHERE SHELLS FALL

Party Learns to Tell by Sound of Oncoming Missile Whether It Spells Danger.

By FLOYD P. GIBBONS.

Copyright, 1918, by The Chicago Tribune Company.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES UNDER GENERAL FOCH IN FRANCE, May 14.—The third and fourth days' march brought us into the nearer regions of the front, where the movement of refugees on the roads seemed greater, where the roar of the guns came constantly from the north and where enemy motors drove through the area on missions of frightfulness.

There is a Major in our command whose knowledge of French is confined to a single affirmative exclamation. "Ah, oui!" He worked this expression constantly in a French conversation with a refugee woman from the recently invaded districts who occupied, with her children, another room in the same cottage. When the Major started to leave two days later the refugee woman addressed him in a reproving tone and with tears. He could only reply with a sympathetic "'Ah, oui," which seemed to make her all the more frantic.

An interpreter straightened matters out by informing the Major that the woman wanted to know why he was leaving without getting her furniture.

"What furniture?" asked the puzzled Major.

"Why, she says," said the interpreter, "that you promised her you would send three army trucks to her house back of the German lines and bring all of her household goods to this side of the line. She says that she explained all of it to you and you said, 'Ah, oui.'"

The Major has since abandoned the "Ah, oui" habit.

At 1 o'clock one morning orders reached the battalion for a reconnoissance detail. Each battery was to be ready to take the road by daylight. We were off at break of day in a motor truck with a cart of telephone wire hitched on behind. Thirty minutes later we rumbled along the roads under the range of German field pieces and arrived at the village designated as battalion headquarters.

Under Heavy Shelling.

We found we were the first to reach the sector allotted for American occupation. Our ears did not delude us about the activity of the sector, but I found that officers and men of the detail were inclined to accept the heavy shelling in a noncommittal manner until a French interpreter attached to us remarked that the artillery action in this sector was as intense as any he had ever experienced at Verdun.

If the ever present crash of shells reminded us that we were opposite the peak of the German push, there was plenty of work to engage minds that might otherwise have paid too much attention to the dangers of their location. A chalk cellar with vaulted ceiling and ventilators unfortunately opening on the enemy side of the superstructure was selected as the battalion command post. The men went to work immediately to remove the piles of dirty billeting straw under which were found china, glass, silverware and family portraits, all of which had been hurriedly buried by the owners of the house not two weeks before.

While linemen planned battalion communications and battery officers surveyed gun positions, a battalion commander and two orienting officers went forward to the frontal zone to get a first look at our future targets and establish observation posts from which our firing could be directed. I accompanied a small party which was led by a French officer familiar with the sector. It was upon his advice that we left the road and took cuts across the fields, avoiding path and road intersections and taking advantage of any shelter offered by the ground.

The fields on our way bore enormous craters left by the explosions of poorly directed German shells of heavy calibre. Orders were to throw ourselves face downward on the ground upon sound of each approaching missile. There is no textbook logic, judging from the sound of shell, whether it has your address written on it or not, but it is surprising how quickly that education may be obtained by experience. Several hours of walking and dropping to the ground resulted in an attuning of ears which made it possible to judge approximately whether the oncoming, whining, unseen thing from above would land dangerously near or ineffectively far from us. The knowledge was common to all of us, and all our ears were keenly attuned for sounds. Time after time collective judgment and consequent prostration of the entire party were proved to be well timed by the arrival of a shell uncomfortably close.

Shell Explosion Near By.

We gained a wooded hillside which the German had tried in vain to locate with his howitzer fire. We mounted to a forest plateau, in the centre of which a beautiful white château still held out against the enemy's best efforts to locate it with his guns. One shell addressed in this particular direction fortunately announced its coming with such unmistakable vehemence that our party all landed in the same shell-hole at once. Every head was down when the explosion came. Branches and pieces of tree trunk whirled upward, the air became populated with deadly bumble bees and humming birds, for such is the sound that shell splinters make. When I essayed our shell-hole afterward, I couldn't fathom how five of us had managed to accommodate ourselves in it, but in the rush of necessity no difficulty had been found.

Passing from the woods forward, one by one, over the bald field, we skirted a village that was being heavily shelled, and reached a trench on the side of the hill in direct view of the German positions. The enemy partly occupied a ruined village not 200 yards away, but our glasses were unable to pick up a trace of a single person in the debris. French shells arriving endlessly in the village shot geysers of dust and wreckage skyward. It was from this village several days later that our infantry patrols brought in prisoners, all of whom were suffering from shell shock. But our men in the village opposite underwent the same treatment at the hands of the German artillery.

It is true of this sector that what corresponds to the infantry front line is a much safer place to be than in the reserve positions or about the gun pits in the villages, or along the roads in our back area. The front line activity is something of minor consideration, as both sides seem to have a greater interest at other points and, in addition to that, the men of both sides are busy deepening trenches and shelters. There are numerous machine gun posts which sweep with lead the indeterminate region between the lines, and at night patrols from both sides explore as far as possible the holdings of the other side. But up to the present writing there has not been so much as a single prepared raid on either side.

ANARCHISTS PLOT AGAINST AMERICA

Police Arrest Three Russians and Seize 30,000 Copies of Propaganda Magazine.

GROUPS IN MANY CITIES

MANY ARRESTS TO FOLLOW

Detectives Have Long List of Contributors Active Workers Over the Country.

A nation-wide anarchist plot, the purpose of which was secret agitation in all parts of the country against the United States Government and the spreading of Bolshevist propaganda was frustrated yesterday when the police, following an investigation that has been under way several weeks, arrested Ivan Novikoff, a Russian writer, who is said to be employed by the Nova Mir, the paper with which Leon Trotsky was connected when in this country; Leon Bobkin, and Alexander Burkach.

The new anarchist group, which is of Russian origin, meant to spread its propaganda through the secret circulation of a monthly magazine called Kolokol, which in English means The Bell. The first issue of this paper was printed last week and more than 30,000 copies are said to have been ready for distribution by express and messenger to Chicago, Boston, and other cities.

Many other arrests, it was said, would probably follow, the authorities being in possession of the names of several thousand persons in various parts of the country who are believed to be active sympathizers and supporters of the new group. The men under arrest will be turned over to the Federal authorities this morning. They are held at Police Headquarters charged with entering into a conspiracy to overthrow the Government of the United States. It was said last night that this may prove to be a case that will call forth the most drastic action permitted by law.

In the basement of the building occupied by the Russian paper Novy Mir, at 113 East Tenth Street, Lieutenant George Busbee of the bomb squad, who directed the investigation, found about 3,000 copies of Kolokol. David Goldfield, editor of Novy Mir, was summoned to Police Headquarters yesterday afternoon and examined at length by Lieutenant Busbee and agents of the Federal Government. He expressed great surprise when informed that several thousand copies of the anarchist publication had been found in the basement of the building occupied by Novy Mir, and maintained, Lieutenant Busbee said, that he knew nothing about the new anarchist venture. A number of other Russian writers were also examined during the day in the offices of the Department of Justice Bureau of Investigation at 13 Park Row.

To Overthrow Government.

"We have information," said Lieutenant Busbee, "that Novikoff, Durkach, and other anarchists have been conspiring to start an agitation in the United States, the brazen purpose of which was nothing less than the overthrow of our government, and the establishment of a reign of terror. Of course, they never had a chance even if the conspiracy had not been nipped before it could even get started. We have a long list of persons who have given financial support to the movement, the money being contributed to pay for distributing anti-American propaganda throughout the country. The man Novikoff edited the first issue of the paper, while to Durkach was intrusted the work of getting the financial backing. Bobkin appears to have been a more or less ignorant tool of the other two."

The names of the other persons believed to be concerned in the conspiracy will be turned over to the Department of Justice this morning. The detectives, all members of the Bomb Squad, who got to the bottom of the conspiracy and made the arrests yesterday are Gilbert, Kiely, Brown, and Polignani. They located the concern which contracted to print the first issue of the Kolokol, followed the printed sheets to the binders, and saw great lots of the completed copies delivered at the building occupied by Nova Mir.

To circulate the paper the anarchists packed the copies in boxes which were labeled as containing canned goods, lemons, and dried fruits. Several of these boxes were taken to express offices, where they were seized by the police.

Lieutenant Busbee said the arrests were the most important since the taking of Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman, both of whom are followers of the Russian anarchistic group, and both of whom are now serving terms in Federal prisons. The Federal authorities gave the greatest credit to the police for their work, and it was said at the office of Chief De Woody of the Department of Justice Secret Service that Lieutenant Busbee had not overstated the importance of the work done by his men.

"The evidence shows," said an agent of the Department of Justice, after he had glanced over a copy of Kolokol, "that a more dangerous group of anarchists has never operated in this country. This propaganda not only calls for the overthrow of our Government but it also seeks to poison the very souls of the people. For instance, one of its objects is to create dissension among the working people and to hold up Government war work through a campaign to keep men from working overtime and to bring about strikes not only in private, but in Government works as well. There are a great many Russians employed in shipyards and munition plants and should those men refuse to work overtime you can easily imagine what it would mean to our ship program and other war efforts."

Some Cities Selected.

Some of the cities which the new group selected as propaganda centres were Cleveland, the centre of the Great Lakes shipping industry; Detroit, the centre of the automobile industry, and also one of the principal centres for the production of airplanes; Pittsburgh, in the steel area; Wilkes-Barre and other coal centres; San Francisco, Tacoma, Baltimore, Boston, Philadelphia, and scores of other leading cities in every part of the country.

The first page of the first issue of Kolokol bears the official motto of the group which is taken from the writings of the Russian anarchist, Bakunin, and which when translated into English reads:

"The spirit of destruction is the spirit of reconstruction."

An editorial on the second page says that "This paper starts as a monthly journal," and that the backers of it "fully realize the responsible and difficult task confronting us."

"Long live anarchy. Long live social revolution. Forward, comrades. Down with Government. Down with separate property. Long live national self-determination, equality, and fraternity," the editorial concludes.

20 GERMANS ROUTED BY AMERICAN PATROL

Artillery Fire Is Below Normal, but Machine Guns Sweep Our Front Lines.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 14, (Associated Press.)—An American patrol in Picardy met and routed a German patrol of twenty men last night.

In this part of the front the Germans are using searchlights and trench mortars occasionally, although the artillery fire is under normal. The American front lines are swept by enemy machine guns, but there have been no casualties.

There is considerable activity back of the German lines.

The Toul setctor, where American troops are stationed, has been exceedingly quiet during the last twenty-four hours. The artillery fire has been at a minimum and there is little aerial activity until late in the day.

The American Expeditionary Force has opened a campaign against food waste. An announcement issued today says liberal increases in the rations of troops on the front line or in England engaged in hard manual labor will be granted, but precautions have been ordered for the prevention of excesses and waste. Commanding officers are requested to emphasise the special importance of food economy in furthering the successful campaigns that are being carried out at home.

The plans require the presence of a company officer at each meal to look into the quality of the food, the manner of its preparation and measures of conservation. The directions order the avoidance of overhelpings which result in waste, the utilization of surplus fats for kitchen grease, the use of bread crusts and stale bread for preparing various dishes, the avoidance of needless throwing away or disposal of unsuitable food, and economy in the use of butter and bread. Disciplinary action will be taken for violations.

The object of the campaign is not the slightest reduction of rations, but the absolute avoidance of waste. It is expected the campaign will result in the saving of tons of food.

Announcement was made today that the developments of modern warfare have necessitated the adoption by the Medical Department of the American Expeditionary Force of two types of mobile hospital units, both of which are designed to give facilities for immediate surgical aid to the seriously injured, instead of removing them long distances to hospitals without treatment.

The first unit will consist of fixed sterilizing, X-ray and electric light plants, mounted on two auto trucks. Accompanying them on ordinary trucks, which will be temporarily assigned as needed, are to be a light frame operating room, tentage, and material sufficient to establish a hospital of 120 beds.

The operating features will provide all modern facilities. The mobile hospitals may function independently or they may be attached to advanced sanitary formations reinforcing X-ray surgical departments.

The second mobile unit will consist of portable sterilizing X-ray and lighting plants, a light frame operating room and surgical material all mounted on two auto trucks. This unit has no hospital facilities and it cannot function independently, but it will supplement the equipment of advanced field hospitals and provide for immediate aid to non-transportable wounded.

J. G. BENNETT DIES IN BEAULIEU VILLA

Owner of New York Herald Had Relapse After Pneumonia Attack.

ILL FOR SEVERAL MONTHS

LONG A NOTABLE FIGURE

Edited His Paper from France—Leaves Fortune Estimated in 1914 at $25,000,000.

BEAULIEU, France, May 14.—James Gordon Bennett, proprietor of The New York Herald, died at 5:30 o'clock this morning after having been unconscious for two days. Mr. Bennett's last words before relapsing into unconsciousness were in relation to his newspaper interests. Mrs. Bennett was with her husband when he died.

Mr. Bennett had spent the Winter at his villa in Beaulieu. He became overheated while paying a visit to a hospital in Paris in the late Autumn and an attack of grip ensued. He went to the south of France to recuperate but pneumonia developed. From this Mr. Bennett recovered, but the attack was quickly followed by a second. The patient had not left his room since January, and his condition for the past three or four weeks had been grave.

A special cable dispatch to THE TIMES from Paris on May 8 gave the first news in this country of Mr. Bennett's illness. At that time it was stated that his condition was causing his friends great anxiety.

JAMES GORDON BENNETT'S LIFE

Inherited Newspaper Which He Conducted Along His Father's Lines.

James Gordon Bennett inherited not only a great newspaper, which was for years perhaps the most famous news gathering agency of its time, but a prominent social position and a great fortune; and his temperament led him to use the paper as a servant of his personality, for the most part, rather than to subordinate his personality to the demands of the newspaper. With all this, however, his remarkable originality did much to make The Herald famous.

The Herald, as well as The Evening Telegram and the Paris edition of The Herald—particularly the Paris edition—was what Bennett made it, but Bennett was considerably more than The Herald. As a patron and encourager of sports, particularly of novel and hazardous sports such as the exploration of the African wilderness, the Arctic, and the air; as one of the most eccentric members of Paris society, as the friend and hunting companion of Kings, and as the man who to his employes liked to play the Caliph of Bagdad, hiring and firing, elevating to the highest positions and demoting to the lowest, paying enormous bonuses, displaying unexampled munificence of reward, and discharging without notice—in all of these characters James Gordon Bennett was a man of distinction and an international figure.

The elder James Gordon Bennett had come to New York in early youth and had started The Herald, writing its first issues all himself, at a time when the city and its journalism were still in the provincial stage, but rapidly growing out of it. And the city was growing more rapidly than the newspapers. In those days personalities, vituperation, and actual physical conflicts between editors were features of New York journalism. The Herald in its beginnings made itself famous by making everybody hate it; Bennett admitted that he atoned for the frequent dulness of the news by magnificent and often irritating inventions.

But Bennett the first was a remarkably good newspaper man for all that. The Herald first began to be taken seriously when it reported the fire of Dec. 16, 1835, with an unexampled fullness and accuracy. From that time on it began to be more and more of a newspaper which got the news. By the time of the civil war it was remarkably good in this function, and the achievements of its enormous staff of war correspondents gave it a distinction which its sensational character could not obliterate. The paper was also prompt to take advantage of the facilities of the Atlantic cables, and in 1866 it paid $7,000 in gold, considerably more in the depreciated paper currency of the time, to have the King of Prussia's speech after the battle of Sadowa cabled in full.

Became Owner in 1872.

James Gordon Bennett the second succeeded to the ownership of this paper on his father's death, in 1872. Born to James Gordon Bennett, Sr., and Henrietta Crean Bennett in Chambers Street, then a fashionable residence district, in May, 1841, he was educated as the future owner of The Herald from childhood. He studied under private tutors in America and France, and when the civil war started obtained a commission in the navy. To his naval experience was due his interest in nautical affairs, which made The Herald for many years unrivaled in ship news and information relating to the naval and military services.

He underwent a thorough training in all departments of the newspaper, and became managing editor of The Herald in 1866. When The Evening Telegram was started, in 1867, he became executive head of that also, and proprietor of both five years later.

At that time Bennett was known widely as a sportsman. He had introduced polo into the United States; he was a leader in yachting and coaching; and in the social activities of a young society man of the period he was one of the most prominent figures in New York. That The Herald under his management was going to continue to be an eccentric newspaper, but a good newspaper, was evident from the first. In 1875 he went to Europe, hunted up Henry M. Stanley, who had achieved a brilliant journalistic beat as correspondent of The Herald with the British Abyssinian expedition in 1868, and commissioned him to go into the unknown darkness of Central Africa and find David Livingstone, the Scotch missionary, who had not been heard of for years. Bennett spent many thousands of dollars backing Stanley, but Stanley found Livingstone, and not only found him, but made discoveries of his own which practically opened up Africa to European and American knowledge.

During the hard times of the panic of 1873 Bennett opened free kitchens in the poorer quarters of the city, where Delmonico's served soups and other foods free. This naturally contributed to the great end of making people talk about the paper, which his father had once declared was the first great condition of success; but even more spectacularly was this end achieved some two or three years later. One Monday morning The Herald published a full-page account of the breaking out among the holiday crowds in Central Park of the animals confined in the Zoo. Some fifty persons, the story said, had been killed and the animals were still at large in the city streets, despite the efforts of hundreds of soldiers sent out to hunt them by the Federal and State authorities. Thousands of parents in New York would not send their children to school that morning, and many a timorous business man decided that his health would not permit him to go to the office; for very few people who had read the headlines and the terrifying "lead" had gone on down to the very last paragraph at the bottom of the last column, which contained the statement that, to be sure, the events chronicled above had not happened, but that they might happen at any time unless the lion and rhinoceros cages were made a little stronger.

Interested in the Arctic.

Bennett was intensely interested in arctic exploration. In 1882 he backed the Jeannette expedition into the arctic, at great expense and with unfortunate results, and his interest in the matter never died down. However, when the north pole was actually discovered and the controversies between Dr. Frederick Cook and Commander (now Admiral Robert E. Peary raged, in 1909, Mr. Bennett took the side for a time of Dr. Cook, whose story of his explorations was published in The Herald.

In 1883 Mr. Bennett and John W. Mackay started the Commercial Cable Company, and the association of the two was extremely profitable, not only to the cable company but to The Herald. In 1882 the Herald Relief Fund for Irish sufferers was another example of Bennett's genius for réclame, and his own subscription of $100,000, which headed the list, was sufficient to bring him an enormous amount of personal popularity.

But this opportunity for power, for the exercise of ambition, and for public service that Bennett had acquired by means of the prestige of The Herald and his own gift for publicity was in large measure thrown away by his taking up of permanent residence abroad in the late seventies. In the latter part of 1876 Mr. Bennett became engaged to Miss Edith May, daughter of a prominent Washington family. The marriage date had been set for Dec. 26, the trousseau had been brought over from Paris, and everything was ready when something occurred to make Dr. May, the father of the bride-to-be, withdraw his consent to the match. Accounts differ as to just what was the reason for the reversal of opinion regarding Mr. Bennett's desirability as a son-in-law.

At any rate, on Jan. 3, 1877, Fred May, the fiancée's brother, met Bennett as he was coming out of the Union Club, at Fifth Avenue and Twenty-first Street, and beat him over the head with a horsewhip. Bennett challenged May to a duel. On Jan. 8 the duel took place on a farm near the boundary line of Delaware and Maryland. Three shots were exchanged, nobody was hurt, and the parties afterward went through the form of a reconciliation. But the reconciliation was only formal.

Went to Live in Paris.

Soon afterward Mr. Bennett took up his permanent residence in Paris. In recent years he has maintained a residence at 39 East Forty-seventh Street, as well as the old homestead on the upper part of Washington Heights, where his boyhood had been spent and where his father was buried; but Paris was his home, and the return trips which he often made to the United States were never of very long duration.

Since then The Herald has been edited at long-range, although recently the detailed direction of its affairs has been in the hands of an Executive Committee and various sub-committees of editors in the local office. Hundreds of stories are told by Herald men of the close watch Bennett kept on the paper. For many years he read every issue carefully, having them all mailed to Paris; though more recently he had been in the habit of getting trusted subordinates to make summaries of the news in each issue for him.

On one occasion he cabled a request for a certain employe to come to Paris at once. This was something that often happened, but the man in question happened to be employed at the moment on a particularly delicate piece of work for which he had peculiar qualifications. The editor in charge cabled Mr. Bennett that the man was indispensable; whereupon he asked for a list of all the men who could be so regarded. After careful scrutiny of the staff, a list of perhaps a dozen men was sent back to the owner, who at once discharged them all by cable. "I will have no indispensable men in my employ," he added.

The Herald had been the first newspaper to print weather reports in New York; and while the business of ship news reporting went far back into the beginnings of the nineteenth century, The Herald developed it in the 70s and 80s to a point which other papers had not yet attained. The Herald was also in those days the leading authority for news of the Caribbean, of the Far East, and of Europe. It followed American squadrons on ordinary peace-time cruises abroad with special correspondents, it printed the personal news of the army and navy as no other paper was doing, and it was well known for the fullness of its reports of social activities. All of these departments, as well as many technical details of the paper's makeup, were the reflections of Mr. Bennett's personal preferences.

In Paris James Gordon Bennett, known to the French as M. Gordon Bennett, a name which he detested, became a notable character. He owned a magnificent residence in the Avenue d'Iena and leased a big apartment in the Avenue des Champs Elysées, where he lived sometimes and whence The Paris Herald, which he presently founded, was edited. Besides this he had the villa at Beaulieu, where he died, and an enormous country place and shooting preserves near Versailles.

Did Not Like Kaiser.

He was the friend of monarchs, the late King Leopold of Belgium, and the late assassinated King Carlos of Portugal were among his best friends, and he was well acquainted with King Edward VII. For the German Emperor, however, he appears always to have had an aversion.

His yacht, the Lysistrata was lying at Beirut one day some years ago when the Kaiser, in the Hohenzollern, and accompanied by several German warships, arrived at that port. The "Commodore" was on shore at the time and as he came back he noticed with a frown that the skipper of his yacht had "dressed ship" in honor of the Emperor, as had the master of every other vessel in the harbor.

As the Captain met him at the gangway, Mr. Bennett, with a glance aloft, demanded: "What's all that about?"

"I thought," replied the Captain, paling, "that if you were on board you would order it done."

"Never mind what you thought. Hereafter, when you are in the slightest doubt about what I want done, do nothing. In that way you can always please me. Order those flags down." Then he went on to the bridge and gave the order to steam out to sea.

As a matter of fact, the Captain of the Lysistrata was never her commander in Mr. Bennett's estimation. He always referred to the other as the "First Officer"; he himself was in command. He had a master's license, and when at sea he stood watch regularly and plotted courses—in fact, took entire charge of the navigation, and he often took the wheel.

Some years ago the Gordon Bennett automobile races were run in Germany. The Berlin correspondent of The New York Herald was semi-officially approached by the Imperial Automobile Club, and afterward officially by the German Foreign Office, to know whether Mr. Bennett would attend the race, in which case he would be the guest of the Kaiser. His Majesty would not, however, send an official invitation unless assured in advance that it would not be refused. The correspondent immediately journeyed to Paris to inform Bennett of the situation. He merely smiled, shrugged his shoulders, and said nothing. Three days later the Paris papers announced that he had left on his yacht for a month's cruise in the Mediterranean.

This aversion, apparently, never left him. It was natural from Mr. Bennett's residence in France and from his understanding of European affairs that his newspapers should have been most active in support of the allied cause from the minute war broke out in 1914, but about their antagonism to Germany there was from the first a bitter intensity which came to other American publications later when German atrocities became known.

In 1887 Mr. Bennett began the publication of the Paris edition of the Herald, and later a London paper, which was short lived. It has been said that Bennett was led to establish his Paris paper through his custom of sending typewritten copies of the thousand-word summaries of the day's news in The New York Herald, which were in those days cabled to him regularly, to a few of his friends in the city.

The feature of the paper which probably made it more talked about than anything else was a letter on the editorial page, signed "Old Lady from Philadelphia," and first appearing in 1889, asking how to change the readings on a Centigrade thermometer to the Fahrenheit scale. This letter has been reprinted every week or so ever since, and hundreds of letters have reached The Herald office every month from kindly persons who overlooked the date and wanted to satisfy the old lady's anxiety to learn how hot it was in her own language.

Mr. Bennett became known not only in France, but all over the world as a sportsman. Yacht racing, which had long been one of his hobbies—he won a race from Sandy Hook to the Isle of Wight in 1866, and came in close second to an English yacht in a race from Queenstown to New York in 1870—still absorbed him. Pleasure yachting was one of his hobbies.

For many years he kept a big steam yacht called the Namouna, together with a small craft named the Sereda. In 1900 he had George Watson of Glasgow design the Lysistrata, a distinct departure in yacht construction, and she was built by the Denny Brothers at a cost of $625,000. On her Mr. Bennett spent about half his time up to his death. She carried a crew of 100 men. She had three sets of rooms for her owner, each on a different deck, and one fitted with a bathroom containing every known device for bathing, with particular attention to a Turkish bath, in the efficacy of which Mr. Bennett was a firm believer. Besides, the yacht always carried on a voyage one of the finest Jersey cows it was possible to find in England, whose selection and purchase was annually a difficult task for the London correspondent of The Herald. The cow was milked by electricity. One or more automobiles were carried, lashed upon the after deck.

Aeronautics a Hobby.

Aeronautics were another hobby. The Gordon Bennett Cup, first given in 1906, was perhaps the principal prize of balloonists, and a number of notable races were brought about by competition for its possession. In 1908 he gave a cup to the French Aero Club which was competed for in a number of airplane races which did much to stir up interest and enthusiasm for that art.

Meanwhile Mr. Bennett's position as absentee landlord of The Herald and Telegram made life on those papers a fascinating but precarious adventure. One Saturday there arrived by cable an editorial by Mr. Bennett based on Abraham Lincoln's observation that you can fool all of the people some of the time, and some of the people all the time; but that you cannot fool all of the people all the time. For a long time, said Mr. Bennett, he had been fooling some, if not all, of the people into believing that The Telegram was making money, but he had now come to the conclusion that it was impossible to fool all of the people all the time, even with an evening paper. Consequently, this issue of The Evening Telegram would be its last. On Monday, however, the paper came out as usual. Somebody had cabled the editorial back to Paris as it was printed, with a query for instructions, and word came back to continue the publication.

About The Herald office there were formerly several men who had been his personal attendants or had served on the yacht, and who were charged with keeping in order the big private office in the front of the second floor of the building, which was always kept ready, with the inkstand filled, new pens, and the calendar up to date, in case the "Commodore" should suddenly drop from somewhere without giving notice.

Mr. Bennett was passionately fond of dogs, opposed vivisection, and printed as many dog stories as possible in his papers. In the 1912 Presidential campaign, when he came back to New York for his longest stay since he made up his mind to reside permanently in Paris, Roosevelt was referred to only as "the third-term candidate" until he was shot at Milwaukee. Then The Herald decided not to let anybody be under a misapprehension as to just who the victim was. Since then his name has been printed whenever necessary.

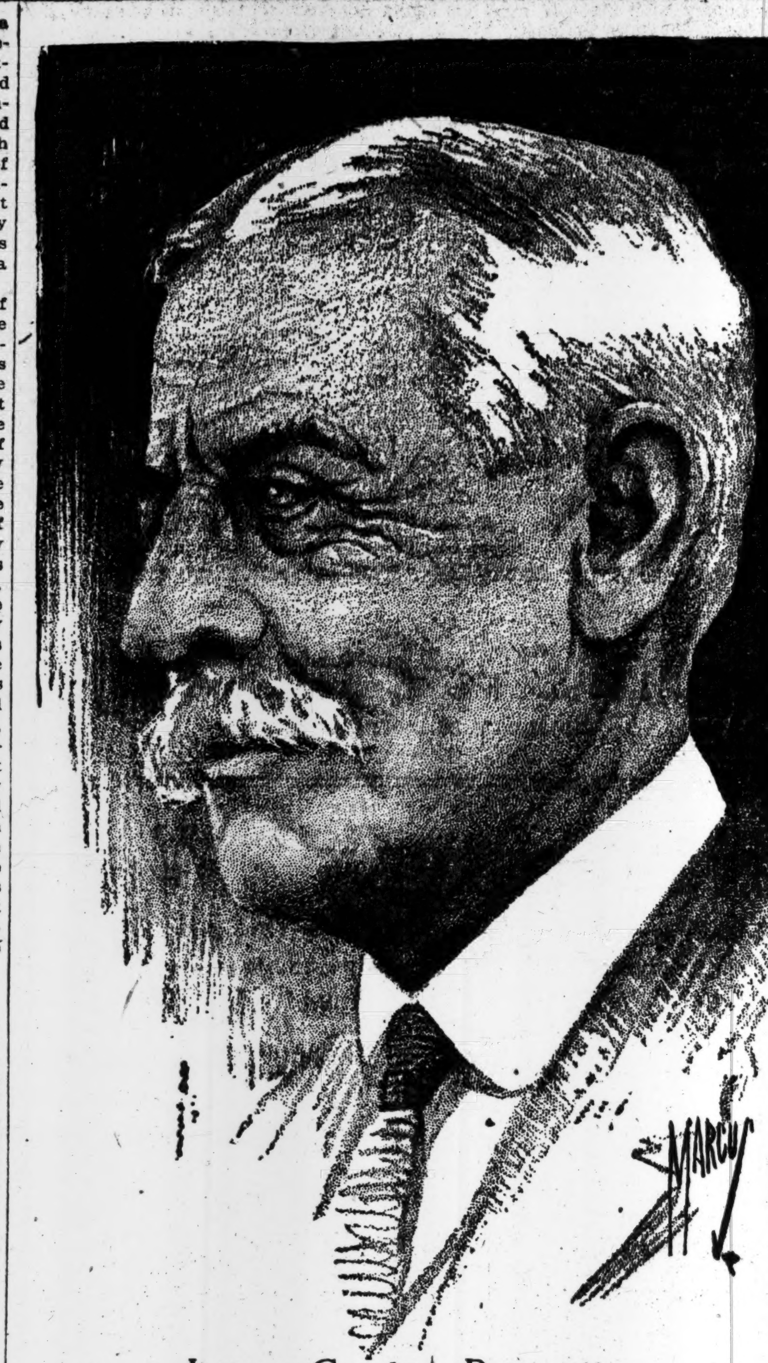

Injured Driving Coach.

Some twenty years ago Mr. Bennett was seriously injured while trying to drive with a coach and four through the arched doorway of his residence in Paris, but recovered fully. In 1913 he was seriously ill, but recovered without permanent injury to his health, though after that he spent a great deal of time in the tropics, usually in India or the Caribbean.

Mr. Bennett was regarded by every one as a confirmed bachelor, until, on Sept. 10, 1914, he surprised his friends, at the age of 73, by marrying the Baroness George Julius de Reuter. Mrs. Bennett was an American born, a Miss Maud Potter of Philadelphia, who had been married to Baron George Julius de Reuter, a younger son of the founder of the news service and brother of Baron Herbert de Reuter, its present head. Her first husband, who had been a close friend of Mr. Bennett, died in 1909, leaving two adult children. The marriage took place at the American Church in Paris and Ambassador Herrick was one of the witnesses. Mr. Bennett had been received into the Episcopal Church on the day before.

This was just after the battle of the Marne. During the tense period before the German advance on Paris was stopped Mr. Bennett remained in that city, and it was even said that in the stormy days at the beginning of the war, when the fate of the thousands of American tourists in Europe was a matter of intense interest to their friends at home, Mr. Bennett had covered the American Embassy for his paper.

Recently the Bennetts had spent most of their time at Beaulieu. The latest and most splendid of the Bennett yachts, the Lysistrata, was sold to the Russian Red Cross in 1916, as yachting under the old conditions no longer was possible.

PAPER AT NICE PAYS TRIBUTE.

Says Mr. Bennett Often Declared Boches Must Be Destroyed.

NICE, May 14.—Eclaireur de Nice pays a tribute today to James Gordon Bennett and refers to his long association with the Riviera. The newspaper says that Mr. Bennett often called at its office to see the latest war news and always remarked:

"How many boches were killed today? Their desrtuction is of the first consideration, for the world cannot live in peace until the Boche is completely destroyed."

TRIBUTE FROM MR. WATTERSON

Editor, in Hospital, Distressed by Loss of Friend.

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 14.—Henry Watterson, from his bed at Norton Memorial Infirmary in Louisville today paid the following tribute to Mr. Bennett:

"I am truly distressed at the death of Mr. Bennett, for we were lifelong friends. Perhaps it drew us together that sometimes we were assailed by unjust exaggeration and saddled with delinquencies to which we thought we could honestly plead not guilty. Each of us was able to show an unbroken line of hard work, each devoted to his calling, and proud of it. He sought to make The Herald, as I have sought to make The Courier Journal, a public institution. He had no ulterior aims. He was Scotch to the bone; largely fitted and equipped for the task he set himself; upright and fearless.

"I received from him a cable message of sympathy and encouragement in my present illness, dated Beaulieu, April 30, advising me of his own indisposition, and cheerily wishing us both "good luck." Now that they tell me I am on the way to recovery, he is gone. But I cannot allow him to go without laying my rose upon his grave.

BENNETT A FIGURE IN MANY ANECDOTES

Stories of His Peculiarities Told by Acquaintances All Over the World.

STOOD BY PARIS HERALD

Refused to Leave When Germans Were Advancing on City, and Declared They Could Not Take It.

James Gordon Bennett was one of the personalities about whom anecdotes cluster until they form almost a literature in themselves. With a newspaper to give wide publicity to many of his preferences, with a wide acquaintance all over the world to pass on curious stories about him and a long life almost every day of which furnished materials for new tales, he became probably the subject of more anecdotes than any other American living.

An illustration of his bent for practical joking of an odd kind, which is fresh in the minds of New Yorkers, was his appropriation of the mottoes, "All the News That's Fit to Print" from THE NEW YORK TIMES, and "It Shines for All," from The New York Sun, which he printed on either side of the top of the front page in The Herald. Harry S. Brown, an editor and writer, who was associated with Mr. Bennett for twenty-five years until 1916, said yesterday: "It puzzled many persons to find a motive for this, but he did it for pure deviltry. It was his idea of fun."

Mr. Brown added that behind the many oddities thickly encrusted on the surface of Mr. Bennett's character, as it was known to the public, was a streak of courage and principle which had been insufficiently appreciated.

"He never showed to better advantage," he said, "than in the way he stuck to Paris during the advance of the Germans from the Marne. The Government moved to Bordeaux, the Paris Daily Mail moved there, and most of the Paris papers moved away, but the Commodore would not budge. He ran so short of printers that he was reduced to getting out a two-page paper. I was then in London and he sent us word that he would keep on getting out the paper as long as he had a printer in his employ.

"While I was in the London office we were getting very blue as the Germans advanced from day to day. He learned from our messages how we felt and took us to task sharply, told us that there was no danger of losing Paris, said that the French were gathering strength and that the Germans were falling into a trap. He was a great student of military strategy all his life and he had the situation accurately mapped out. When attempts were made to induce him to leave Paris, he lost his temper and said he would keep on printing his paper until the Germans got there, and if they ever did get into Paris he would keep on printing it if they would let him. His example had a fine effect on the courage of the people and gave them a hearty respect for Americans. His paper became the rallying point for patriotic Americans.

Forgave Colonel Roosevelt.

"He foresaw that America would get into the war as soon as the Germans opened their submarine policy, and he did his utmost to bring America in sooner. One illustration of how deeply he felt about the matter was the way in which he forgave Colonel Roosevelt, a thing that was very hard for him to do. Although for years he had forbidden the mention of the name of Colonel Roosevelt in his papers, he was so much pleased with the vigor of the ex-President's pro-war policy that he personally dictated the editorial, cabled from Europe, in which The Herald expressed sorrow that Colonel Roosevelt was not President."

Leo L. Redding, an old employe of Mr. Bennett, in an article in Everybody's Magazine, told recently how on one occasion, on their trip from Europe to this country, Colonel Henry Watterson and Mr. Bennett discussed newspaper methods, Colonel Watterson maintaining that The Herald would benefit greatly if more initiative was allowed to the staff. Mr. Bennett would not agree to this, and to prove that he was right, announced that he would promote the first ship news reporter to board the ship to the position of city editor and reduce the city editor to ship news reporter. Six Herald men boarded the ship. Mr. Bennett asked the first one on board what his name was. It was Julius Chambers. That day Chambers was city editor, a position he occupied for three months.

Backed His Judgment.

H. S. Brown said yesterday that the outstanding characteristic of Mr. Bennett as a newspaper man and the quality which led to his great success during his younger days, when he took the most active interest in his paper, was his willingness to back his own judgment to any extreme.

"He was one of the best sports that ever lived," he said. "He would not complain no matter what it cost him to back his judgment, whether it went right or wrong. His greatest newspaper feat, that of sending Stanley to Africa, was the result of his reading a mere paragraph in a newspaper about the anxiety of some missionaries regarding Livingstone.

"During his more active days, he kept watch for rising storms all over the world, and whenever he thought a war, a revolution, or some other great event was impending, even though the sky was clear, he would send a correspondent there. He has sent men to Portugal, to Greece, to the Orient, to any part of the world, on a long-distance chance that something was going to happen there in a few months or a year or so, and his prevision in such matters has been uncanny.

"Sometimes he has sent men on such long shots without even informing the man why he was sent, instructing him only to pick up gossip of prominent Americans there and send it on. When a man so placed complained that all was quiet, and asked to be allowed to return, his direction to stay usually came in the form of a favorite story. He would say that he once sent a man to a show every night with instructions to watch the lion's mouth and watch the head of the man which was inserted into it as the great feature of the show. He said that he told this man to cover the assignment until the performer's head was bitten off, and that his reporter faithfully covered it for about one hundred performances, and then took a chance and stayed away on the night when the lion did take the bite.

"He was a great believer in the ideas of his father. His head was filled with his father's maxims on newspaper-making and he applied his precepts to every situation. It was his father who originally sent him abroad in order to give him the most thorough training in European affairs, foreseeing the day when they would be of greater importance as news in America. His idea that one man was the whole newspaper was his father's. When James Gordon Bennett, Sr., had practically retired, the editor was a man named Hudson. He used to say that he got out the paper for just one reader, James Gordon Bennett, Sr., and that has been the way with The Herald during the son's time as well.

While keeping The Herald strictly non-partisan in politics in later years, he made an exception to this policy twice to fight candidates for a third term. When Grant, after two terms as President, was taking his trip around the world, Commodore Bennett divined that he would be a candidate again, and published every day an editorial on "Caesarism." He was laughed at for months. It became a joke with newspapers all over the country. But finally Grant was persuaded to make the attempt, and he was defeated. Mr. Bennett made the same fight against Roosevelt, not because of his personal differences with Colonel Roosevelt, but his opposition on principle to the third-term policy.

"His fight against pasteurized milk was an example of the extent to which he would go in backing his judgment. He tried it and it disagreed with him. He got into a controversy with Nathan Straus, who was supplying free pasteurized milk to children and nothing could dissuade him from a great campaign against pasteurized milk. He lost hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of advertising, but this only resulted in setting him more firmly than ever against pasteurized milk. His love of dogs led him again into a furious and long-drawn-out crusade against vivisection, which made him many enemies and cost him a good deal of money. In his older days he got tired of these controversies, and, besides, they were difficult to carry on at long range, but even up to his death he took a more active hand in controlling his paper by telegraph than most people suppose.

"Many persons would try to find out the reasons for his occasional visits to this country, because they thought they imported something with reference to his newspaper or his business affairs, but in reality his main purpose was to renew his United States license permitting him to navigate his yacht on any ocean."

Mr. Bennett once gave a sleeping car attendant a tip of 20,000 francs. The following morning his valet, who had noticed the unusual size of the douceur, went to the attendant and explained that Mr. Bennett had made a mistake, having meant to give only 1,000 francs. The man seemed actually relieved to hear this, and at once handed over the odd 19,000 francs, saying that he was sure there had been an error, and he was afraid of being accused of having stolen the money. When Bennett woke up the faithful valet handed him the 19,000 francs, expecting his master to approve his action warmly. To his horror he was greeted with a flood of abuse. "You infernal idiot, do you think I don't know what I'm doing? If I care to give the man 20,000 francs, I can do it, can't I? How dare you interfere with my business? Take the money back at once, and if ever I catch you butting in again, out of my door you go, so be careful in future!" And off the wretched valet had to go with the 19,000 francs. The car attendant retired from his job and bought a hotel at Boulogne, where he is now living comfortably.

Won at Monte Carlo.

Mr. Bennett used to throw money about pretty considerably, but there were times when he regretted his generous impulses. For instance, on one occasion at Monte Carlo he went into the gambling rooms and began to play. He was never a gambler, but seemed to feel it his duty to visit the rooms every now and then and throw away a few thousand francs. This day, as usual, he carelessly dropped a thousand-franc note on a number, another on the four numbers, two more on the column and the color. While he was chatting with one of his friends the number came up, but Mr. Bennett failed to notice it, and went on talking. By a stroke of luck the number came up again, and this time the croupier called his attention to the large amount of his winnings, which had by now run to the maximum. The total was more than 75,000 francs.

Various indications about the Herald Building in New York and about The Herald itself would lead even the most casual observer to gather that the late proprietor of that newspaper had a weakness for owls.

On the preserve he leased at Versailles Mr. Bennett was accustomed to keep a lot of those birds of night, and he often sent to England for more, as the owls frequently got away.

His study in the apartment at 104 Avenue des Champs Elysées, a small, octagonal room, was full of owls, or, rather, images of them. They blinked at you from clocks, from inkstands, from the heads of paper cutters, from calendars, from bric-à-brac of costly make, which was scattered over tables and desks and piled on the floor. One glared at you from a representation of the Great Seal of The Herald, in a gilt frame on the wall, with its motto, "La nuit porte conseil," which is one way of saying if you sleep on a thing you may think differently about it in the morning—a motto which Mr. Bennett did not always follow.

If you were shown into this sanctum—for it was a sort of holy of holies with Herald men—you would always find Mr. Bennett a courteous host. On the table and on the desk, where the owl-shaped things afforded room, you would notice a number of big blue pencils, each a foot long. These he always used in writing, and generally in signing his name. Almost invariably Mr. Bennett's companion in the study would be a favorite little French papillon dog, which was carried wherever he went on his journeys. He was nervous in manner—almost shy at times; but when angry his speech, however disconnected, was always forcible.

Mr. Bennett was as fond as any one of a practical joke so long as it was not played upon himself, and he was always willing to pay the piper.

On one of his cruises in the North Sea, with a congenial party on board, he put in at Amsterdam. The guests had become a little bored because of the disagreeable weather encountered, and their host decided he would provide them with an orignal sort of entertainment.

An excellent theatrical company was playing at one of the local amusement houses, and Mr. Bennett invited its members aboard the yacht one afternoon. While they were occupied below, he gave orders to put out to sea. When the actors and actresses realized where they were, land was no longer in sight, and it was dark. There was no hope of getting back to Amsterdam in time to play the performance booked. They were in great distress, but the "Commodore" had them give a private performance for the benefit of his guests, and not only gave each a liberal present, but reimbursed the theatre for its loss.

Listened to His Friends.

Mr. Bennett had the greatest regard for the opinion of some of his friends in society who knew nothing about newspapers. One of them once complained that he could not read The Paris Herald easily. The effect of the black ink on the shiny paper hurt his eyes, he said.

This started the owner of The Herald upon a course of experimenting. One morning The Herald startled Paris by appearing in blue ink. A few days later it came out in green. Not long afterward it gave its news in purple, and then after a few days more it smote its readers with red ink. Then it went back to black.

One thing that Mr. Bennett would not permit was the mention in his papers of any of his friends in a way that was in the slightest degree derogatory.

A reporter in the Sunday department of the New York edition was ordered by his superior to write an article about the late Duchess of Manchester, in which something was said about her Grace which was not exactly laudatory—not through any fault of the reporter, either. The article was brought to Mr. Bennett's attention. He cabled to ask the name of the man who had written the article. When he had been informed, he cabled brief orders to dismiss the reporter, and would accept no explanation.

It used to be a common saying in the Paris office that if Mr. Bennett gave a reward for something that pleased him he would almost always conceive a prejudice against the recipient of favor soon afterward and either fine him for some mistake, real or fancied, or reduce his salary again.

On one occasion he "jumped" a young copy reader from $30 a week to $80 and made him editor in charge in the Paris office. The man filled the job satisfactorily for a year or more, when suddenly the "Commodore" decided he would make a change. Therefore he issued an order that the salary of the editor in charge should be reduced to $35 a week and he himself be reduced to his former post.

The "Commodore" was then cruising in the Mediterranean. It was the duty of the editor in charge, before quitting the office at 5 o'clock in the morning, to telegraph a summary of the day's news to Mr. Bennett. Instead of doing this, the deposed editor wrote out his resignation and telegraphed it at the "Commodore's" expense. Then he went out and got a job immediately as correspondent of a New York paper.

Got His Salary Raised.

A story used to be current in the Paris offices of the way one of the subeditors of The Herald had his salary increased.

It was the custom for the men to send out about midnight for a supply of beer. One of the men at the long desk did not drink, and one night, when a footstep that everybody recognized at once sounded in the hallway outside, the empty bottles were hastily stacked on a shelf immediately above the head of the prohibitionist.

As Mr. Bennett entered every pair of eyes was bent upon the "copy" on the table, and pencils worked feverishly. The "Commodore" paused and looked about. The row of bottles above the head of the temperate man caught his gaze. He smiled.

"Ah, Mr. Blank," he said, "you apparently have to buy a lot of refreshment."

"Yes, Sir, replied the other, timidly, and not daring to dissent from any conclusion arrived at by his employer.

"On your salary I don't see how you can afford it," went on the "Commodore." "I think we shall have to increase your salary 100 francs a month." And the salary was increased.

PRAISE BENNETT'S WORK.

Personal Friends Pay Tribute to His Ability as a Journalist.

Personal friends and former associates of James Gordon Bennett in this city received the news of his death yesterday with deep regret. His illness for the past months, coupled with his age, made many of them believe that his life was nearing its end. E. D. De Witt, publisher of Editor and Publisher, for fifteen years business manager of The New York Herald, and subsequently business manager of the Paris edition, who has been one of Mr. Bennett's closest business associates, paid the following tribute to the man and his work:

For fifteen years I worked for Mr. Bennett as his business manager and I acquired in that time the greatest admiration for the man. Generous to a fault, and far-seeing as all great newspapermen must be, he had a master's knowledge of world events long before they happened. Almost by intuition he could foresee just where and when a story was likely to break, and when it broke a Herald reporter was on the scene, whether it was a revolution in Central America or an outbreak among the Indian tribes.

In France he had the love and respect of the whole French people. They regarded him as one who typified all that is best in American life. He made them feel that their interests were close to his heart, and that America and France were destined to live in a true spiritual alliance.

Mr. Bennett had his eccentricities. People have been inclined to judge him rather harshly because of them, but they were the eccentricities of a man who had no patience with the mediocre or the sham—a man who was determined and relentless in his pursuit of the ideals to which he was devoted.

Personal tributes to Mr. Bennett appear in the New York Herald this morning from John Wanamaker and Judge E. H. Gary. Mr. Wanamaker said:

I was privileged to have a close friendship and intimate business relation with James Gordon Bennett for the last twenty-odd years, and this morning's announcement of his death is an overwhelming sorrow.

As the son of the founder of The New York Herald, he was born a journalist and inherited the qualities and rare business acumen of his father, as well as a pride in the city of his birth and intense patriotism for his country, to which in all the years The New York Herald gave courageous and wise expression.

Though much of the time living abroad, The New York Herald was edited by James Gordon Bennett, and its intense loyalty and unpolitical utterances struck the keynote of patriotism and wisdom for the newspapers on both sides of the sea.

He was a remarkable and singular man—a powerful man. He was too big in mind and in purpose to trifle and be annoyed by small things and too confident of his own strength ever to permit precedents or opposing opinions to guide him. He went ahead blazing always his own clear path, and so he was enabled to do some great things that will be better appreciated later on.

Judge Gary says:

I am much grieved to learn of the death of James Gordon Bennett. All in all, he was a man of great public benefit. For many years he had maintained one of the most useful and far-reaching agencies for the distribution of news. The New York Herald, through its numerous bureaus, kept all parts of the world informed as to what was happening in every locality. Every one who was an extensive traveler relied upon this means of keeping in close touch with world affairs.

During the last ten years it had been my good fortune to be well acquainted with Mr. Bennett. He was a gentleman of the old school, modest, unobtrusive, progressive, alert, and convincing. His opinions were positive and he did not easily yield to opposition in discussion, but he was not offensive. He was a constructive force. He was a student of international affairs and in such matters his influence was pronounced.

I have heard him say it was his intention to leave his affairs in such condition that those who had served him long and faithfully would be left in control of The New York Herald, so as to permanently maintain it as a live and aggressive institution. It is to be hoped that he carried this intention into practical effect, for millions of people depend upon this newspaper as a means of daily information.

The death of Mr. Bennett will be deplored by multitudes. He was highly esteemed by all who were intimately acquainted with him and thoroughly understood his methods and aspirations. He was one of the best equipped of all owners of leading newspapers. Personally I had great admiration for him and exceedingly regret his demise.

THINK MRS. BENNETT WILL BE LEGATEE

Editor's Widow Known in Paris as an Able and Clever Woman.

HERALD'S FUTURE IN DOUBT

Representatives of Mr. Bennett Here Not Informed as to Burial or Will.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 14.—Friends in this city of Mrs. James Gordon Bennett, formerly the Baroness de Reuter, know her as an able and clever woman. During the years since their marriage her influence on him has been great, including his business affairs. These friends think that she will be his legatee.

In view of the fact that James Gordon Bennett once expressed the wish that he be buried on his Washington Heights estate, the belief was expressed by some of his friends yesterday that his body would be brought to America for burial. Neither at the office of The New York Herald nor at that of Mr. Bennett's counsel, Robert W. Candler, at 48 Wall Street, could any definite information be obtained as to the funeral arrangements or where his will is to be filed. Mr. Candler issued the following statement:

"At the present time I must ask you to pardon my not making any statement in reference to Mr. Bennett or his affairs, except to say that the news of his death has been received with the deepest sorrow by his relatives and intimate friends, all of whom feel that they have suffered a great personal loss."

George L. Cooper, managing editor of The New York Herald, declared The Herald had no information as to the filing of the will or the probable estimate of Mr. Bennett's estate. The question as to who will get The New York Herald upon Mr. Bennett's death has been a subject of discussion among his friends and associates for many years. At one time it was even reported that Mr. Bennett had expressed his intention to leave his newspaper properties to his employes, the origin of this report being subsequently traced to a statement once made by Mr. Bennett to the Paris Figaro, which was taken to indicate that Mr. Bennett really had some such intention in mind. Since then, however, he was known to have made some changes in his will, and he also married the Baroness de Reuter.

In 1914 his wealth was estimated as high as $25,000,000, but this figure is generally regarded as too high at the present time in view of the expenditures involved in mantaining his newspaper enterprises in this country and France. It is said that he drew up his latest will just before the outbreak of the war, naming as executors George E. Pollock, Vice President of The New York Herald Company; Isaac Townsend and Robert W. Candler, his attorney.

Mr. Bennett several years ago offered his Washington Heights property to New York City as a park. He subsequently withdrew his offer, however, because the gift was not welcomed with a proviso calling for a memorial to his father. Mr. Bennett was the owner of considerable stock in the New York Central, in Commercial Cable Company, and the Valley Farms Company. The ground lease of the property on which The Herald Building stands will expire in about three years. On Mr. Bennett's last visit to New York, he entered into negotiations to build a structure on a plot of ground in Thirty-fourth Street belonging to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, but the deal fell through.

Besides his widow, Mr. Bennett's nearest kin are his sister, Mrs. Isaac Bell, and her son and two daughters, Countess Paul d'Armon and Mrs. Wilfred Ricardo. Isaac Bell, Jr., the nephew of Mr. Bennett, is about 35 years of age, and has never been intimately associated with his uncle. Mrs. Bennett, formerly the Baroness de Reuter, has two sons by her former marriage, of whom Mr. Bennett was said to have been very fond. These sons are the Baron Oliver de Reuter, who is now with his mother on the Riviera, and Second Lieutenant George de Reuter of the Grenadier Guards, now serving in France.

MOUNT VERNON BARS HEARST NEWSPAPERS

Common Council Forbids Sale and Distribution During Period of War.

VOTE STOOD AT 7 TO 3

Ban Is Also Placed on All Publications Issued in the German Language.

The Common Council of Mount Vernon passed an ordinance last night forbidding the sale and distribution in Mount Vernon of all newspapers and publications issued in the German language, also The New York American and The New York Evening Journal during the period of the war under penalty of imprisonment for six months or a fine of $500 or both. The vote stood 7 to 3, Aldermen Sherman Haight, R. J. Secor, and Fred Wood voting against the ordinance. A motion by Alderman Haight to lay the ordinance over until the next meeting drew a tie vote, and Mayor Edward Fletcher Brush voted against the motion.

The ordinance was moved by Alderman William J. Dawson, who said he was not impelled by any "slushy sentiment," but by a spirit of patriotism. He submitted extracts from editorials and letters in The American and Journal which he asserted showed a policy obstructive to America's aims in the war. He read from an editorial in The American of June 16, 1915, which, he asserted, defended the sinking of the Lusitania by a German submarine, and later editorials calling America's part in the war "a Wall Street war" and "Morgan's war."

Mr. Dawson also submitted extracts from later issues of The American and Journal after America had entered the war, in which it was said that the war would be fought in the United States, and that it was a dangerous policy to send troops to Europe. Then he said "William Randolph Hearst has been lauded in Germany. He is the most popular American in Germany today. The Germans are grateful for what he has done for them." He finished by asserting that The American omitted vital parts of the President's proclamation in its issue of May 12.

Alderman Dawson declared that many had asked him to withdraw the ordinance, and Alderman Ransom Caygill, who has a son in the trenches, said he had been asked to vote against it.

The legality of the ordinance was questioned, and Mr. Dawson said: "If it is illegal, let Mr. Hearst come here and prove it."

partment and sent to headquarters and O. K.'d as war measures, they are brought here by the official messenger, and we are told to do the rest."

Mr. Longworth declared that the bill was not essential to the conduct of the war, pointing out that the elimination of red tape and incompetency was what was necessary in the present emergency. After analyzing the bill and suggesting what he termed its weak and unnecessary features, Mr. Longworth concluded:

"There is one alternative, and one I think that we cannot afford to overlook. Has the President in mind a program of reorganization and co-ordination which he is confident would not be approved by Congress? I do not suggest that he has, but suppose it were true, what then?

"Will you give to him the power to do in one way the very thing you would not permit him to do in another?"

In closing the debate Representative Sherley said:

"With very much of what the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Gillett) has said, I am in sympathy. If time were not the most important element in all these war matters, I do not know but that I should concur with most of it. I have no fear of Congress losing its power. In point of face, in my judgment, the time is very near at hand when Congress will use more of its power than in years gone by.

"The great essential of its power is not impaired in any sense by this bill. The power of a legislative body has always been in control over the administrative officers or agencies through the purse, and we retain all of the power we have ever had of controlling the purse-strings of the nation, and by controlling them we can make ineffectual tomorrow the exercise of any power by any administrative officer."

RUSH TO GAIN DISCOUNT ON INCOME TAX BILLS

Collectors Glad to Have Advance Payments to Lighten the Heavy Work in June.

With only today left for the interest deduction of 3 per cent. allowed by law for the payments of income and excess profits taxes, many individuals and representatives of big business interests visited the Internal Revenue offices in this city yesterday and settled with the Government. Many others called and paid their dues without asking for reduction. Revenue Collectors here said they looked for a rush today.

Collector William H. Edwards of the Second, or Wall Street, District, said yesterday that the last date that income and excess profits taxes for 1917 may be paid without incurring a penalty is June 15, one month from today. Already a large percentage of the taxpayers have shown their patriotism by paying before the final date set by law, and this has been of great assistance to the revenue officials, as thereby the enormous task of receiving and properly recording the taxes was distributed over a reasonable period, instead of having the offices swamped on June 15 and preceding days.

Collector Edwards said that advance payments were particularly desirable at this time, as the number of returns received for 1917 was four times as great as those received in 1916, while the taxes reported for 1917 were six times the amount reported for 1916.

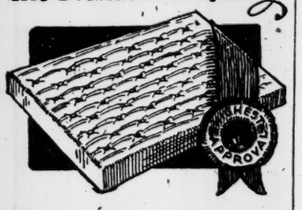

The Collector said bills had been mailed for all returns filed in the Second District during the months of January, February and March, and stated that within the next few days taxpayers who filed returns in April would receive their bills. If, however, any taxpayer wishes to pay at this time he need not wait until he receives a bill, but may pay the amount of tax as computed on the return filed; this amount he can ascertain by referring to the copy which he retained.

"I am confident," Collector Edwards said, "that a great many taxpayers will avail themselves of this opportunity to show now, as they have in the past, a true spirit of patriotism by paying their taxes at an early date."

Woman Hit by Auto Awarded $1,200

Supreme Court Justice Goff ruled yesterday that although a physician may be responding to an urgent call in his automobile his rights "are no greater than the rights of the driver of any other automobile." A jury then brought in a verdict for $1,200 in a suit of Mrs. Mary Jennie Graham against Dr. Louis Jameson of 336 West 145th Street, whose car struck Mrs. Graham at 155th Street and Eighth Avenue on Feb. 25, 1917. The plaintiff sued for $5,000.

WAR CRISIS NOT OVER SAYS LORD READING

Warns American People Against False Optimism at Bar Association Meeting.

TELLS OF OTTAWA MESSAGE

Declares It Was at Variance with the Views of the British Government.

Warning to the people of America against false optimism in the war, especially as regards the great battle in Flanders, was sounded by Earl Reading, British High Commissioner to the United States, in addressing the New York City Bar Association last night.

"The crisis is not passed," he said, "and it never will be passed until the victory is won."

Lord Reading spoke at some length on the announcement sent from London to Ottawa Sunday night to the effect that American troops would not be used on the battlefields until the United States had a complete and powerful army in France.

"I notice," he said, "that there has been, even during the last forty-eight hours, a statement issued which amazed me, with the knowledge I have of all the events at home and here, that it had been determined that your forces should be kept intact until there was a self-supporting American army to place in the field, and that they were not to be used, as had been originally intended, with the British and the French forces, but be trained and used there as emergency required.

"When I saw the statement I was convinced—indeed, I knew—that there was some mistake in the announcement. I did not hesitate to say so before I could communicate with my Government. I have heard from my Government today, and it stands undoubtedly as the fact that the communication which was supposed to have emanated from a committee of the British War Cabinet never originated in the British War Cabinet at all, and never was seen there. All the sentiment that was there expressed is at variance, and utterly at variance, with the views not only of my Government but, let me add, also of the French Government, and, may I be permitted to add, of your own Administration.

"I confess that I would like to say just one word with regard to your press upon it. Certainly there is no blame attached to them. They are quite right; they were quite right in assuming that it was a document which did originate from the Cabinet at home. The whole explanation of it—I agree not a satisfactory one—is that there was a blunder committed by somebody at home who was charged with the duty of sending out the communication, and in some way it was issued by him. It was sent to Ottawa, and in Ottawa they were quite justified in publishing it as it arrived, and equally your press was justified in publishing it as they read it.

"The fault is a fault with us at home and I say that in case any one should think there had been any error committed here. For once it is clear, as I trust it has been made clear, that there was no foundation for the arrangement which was stated to have taken place. I trust that it will also get rid of the optimistic feeling which was created by that pronouncement. Heaven knows I should only be too glad, as could you, if we could say that the statements there were true and that the emergency had passed and that consequently we could afford to wait and did not require the assistance of the American troops at the moment but would stand until there was a self-supporting army.

"It is not the fact and it is better and, indeed it is right, that we should look at the facts. It is known that it is not the fact. I am not telling anything new. I am only striving to correct a mistaken impression which may have been created by the announcement which came from Ottawa."

WAR BOARD WIDENS IMPORT CONTROL

new regulations do not have to be observed, are:

Commodities not on the restricted list where value does not exceed $100; importations into Alaska, the Canal Zone, the Philippine Islands, Hawaii, Guam, Tutuila, Porto Rico, the Virgin Islands, when for home consumption and not for trans-shipment; commodities from Canada and Newfoundland, except those covered by the Presidential proclamation of Nov. 28.

Commodities on the restricted list come under general license only as follows: When sent by lake or rail and when they originate in Canada or Newfoundland; fresh fruits and fresh vegetables when sent overland from Mexico or overland or by the Great Lakes from Canada, or by rail from Cuba; goods previously exported from the United States when the value does not exceed $500; personal baggage necessary for use on a journey; fresh vegetables from Bermuda shipped on vessels approved by the War Trade Board; fresh fruits and fresh vegetables from Cuba shipped on vessels approved by board; empty drums, cylinders and containers, American owned, which have been used in the exportation of commodities from United States; tobacco from Cuba and the West Indies; cotton from Mexico.

Announcement was made today that, in line with the general plan for more complete control, shipments of raw cotton, except Sea Island and Egyptian cotton, for Great Britain, France, and Italy will have to be approved on and after July 1 by the commissions representing those nations in this country before applications for licenses will be considered.

Shipments to Japan and to the colonies of Great Britain, France, Italy, and Japan also must have special licenses approved by the War Trade Board, but in such cases the approval of the commissions is not demanded.

The same rulings will apply after July 1 to shipments of commodities not exceeding $100 in value for which licenses issued by branch offices of the War Trade Board and by Collectors of Customs have been sufficient.

PERSHING PRAISES BUILDERS OF SHIPS

157 VESSELS COMPLETED

Two Ships a Day on Average Were Launched in America in the Week Ended May 11.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—A cable message from General Pershing, in command of the American forces in France, in which he congratulated the shipbuilders of the nation on the record established in launching the Tuskahoe in twenty-seven days and urged all to exert themselves to the full support of the soldiers in the trenches, was received today by the United States Shipping Board. It read:

"Reference to your cablegram reporting world's record in ship launching, am pleased to say that the spirit of patriotism shown by men building ships is fully recognized and appreciated by their American brothers on the battleline. The support of the united army of shipbuilders at home is essential to the success of the united armies at the front. Extend the army's heartiest congratulations alike to workmen and management for the splendid results already accomplished by American shipbuilders.

"PERSHING."

The message will be placed in the hands of all of the employes in the shipyards of the nation along with the plea of the officials of the Shipping Board and Emergency Fleet Corporation that no moment be lost in placing a great fleet upon the seas to transport men and munitions to France.

Reports which have been received from all shipyards within the last week are the most encouraging which have yet come to the officials and there is every indication that the output will show a steady increase month by month. Every effort is being put forth to establish a new record for the month of May.

Unofficial figures obtained today show that from the time the Emergency Fleet Corporation took control of the shipbuilding of the nation, until May 11, there were completed in American shipyards 157 ships of 1,143,000 tons. Of these, 136 of 991,000 tons were completed by the Emergency Fleet Corporation and represent tonnage commandeered on the ways, and vessels for which new contracts were let. The other 152,000 tons making up the total were commandeered when the Emergency Fleet Corporation took charge, but later were turned back to French and English interests to be completed.

Plans to Rush Work.

Plans for the expansion of the shipyards so that the program can be extended by 50 to 60 per cent. as rapidly as possible, a policy announced yesterday by Charles M. Schwab, Director General of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, in an interview in THE TIMES, are now being completed.

The old-established yards which can turn out large passenger ships will be the first taken into consideration in carrying forward the expansion program. Huge, speedy vessels will be constructed, which will prove difficult quarry for the submarines.

This work of expansion to meet the demands of the War Department will be directed from the new offices of the Emergency Fleet Corporation in Philadelphia. Chairman Hurley and Mr. Schwab both will have offices there, but Mr. Hurley will spend most of his time in Washington. The officials are working in close co-operation to obtain the greatest efficiency out of all departments of the Shipping Board and Emergency Fleet Corporation, and are greatly pleased by the results which already have been obtained in speeding up construction.

Special attention also is being paid to the construction of boilers and other equipment for the hulls which are being put into the water. Up to the present time forty-three wooden hulls have been launched, but there has been delay in obtaining boilers enough for all of them, due to the fact that the steel ships are being equipped first. Boilers have now been delivered, however, for about twenty of the wooden ships, and they will soon be in service.

One 6,878-ton vessel was the average daily steel ship output of the Emergency Fleet Corporation last week. The deliveries of steel ships averaged better than one a day. For the week ended May 11 the deliveries of requisitioned and contract steel ships totaled 48,150 tons.

Two ships a day on the average went off the ways during the week. The launchings of wood ships averaged one a day for the third successive week. They totaled 25,000 tons. The State of Maine, fameus in American shipbuilding, launched its first wood ship, the Andra, 3,500 tons. The builder was the Portland Shipbuilding Company of Portland, Me.

British Expert Says England Will Realize Debt to Our Naval Aid After War.

LONDON, May 14.—American naval aid has been of the greatest help to the British fleet, says Archibald Hurd, the naval expert, writing in The Daily Telegraph on the new situation in the North Sea resulting from the Zeebrugge and Ostend raids, the extension of British mine fields and the generally increasing naval pressure against Germany.

"When the war is over," he says, "the nation will form some conception of the extent of the debt which we owe the American navy for the manner in which it has co-operated, not only in connection with the convoy system, but in fighting the submarines.

"If the naval position is improving today, as it is, it is due to the fact that the British and American fleets are working in closest accord, supported by an immense body of skilled workers on both sides of the Atlantic, who are turning out destroyers and other craft for dealing with the submarines as well as mines and bombs.

"The Germans can have a battle whenever they want it. The strength of the Grand Fleet has been well maintained. Some of the finest battleships of the United States navy are now associated with it. They are not only splendid fighting ships, but they are well offi-

AIRSHIP TAKES MAIL TO CAPITAL TODAY

Simultaneous with Departure of Airplane Here One Will Leave Washington.

TRIP IN LESS THAN 3 HOURS

First Plane Will Carry President's Letter Booming Red Cross Drive.

The first regular airplane mail service between this city, Philadelphia and Washington starts at 11:30 o'clock this morning with the simultaneous departure from Belmont Park and Potomac Park, Washington, of two mail service planes driven by army aviators. President Wilson and prominent Government officials will witness the departure of the first plane from Washington, and at Belmont Park Postmaster Thomas G. Patten, Collector of the Port Byron R. Newton and other officials will wish good luck to Lieutenant Torey Webb of the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps as he inaugurates the mail service from this end. It is expected the trip will take two hours and a half.

Lieutenant Webb will carry a letter from Governor Whitman to the President, expressing the Governor's best wishes to the head of the American Red Cross, for the success of the Red Cross campaign for a $100,000,000 war relief fund, which starts on next Monday. According to the plans announced yesterday about 4,000 letters will be carried to Washington by Lieutenant Webb as far as Philadelphia, where he will turn the mail sacks over to Lieutenant James Edgerton, who will take them to Washington. Major R. H. Fleet will take the first plane leaving Washington as far as Philadelphia, and thence to New York it will be piloted by Lieutenant Walter Miller.

In addition to sacks of mail Major Fleet will carry a letter, cancelled and autographed by President Wilson, sent by Postmaster General Burleson to Postmaster Patten, who will turn the stamp and envelope over to Noah H. Taussig, to be auctioned off for the benefit of the Red Cross on June 11. The Red Cross announced last night that Mr. Taussig, who is President of the American Molasses Company, has agreed to start the auction with a bid of $1,000.

The new air mail postage stamps were placed on sale yesterday at the Post Office of the three cities. In Philadelphia the first ten were purchased by Postmaster Thornton of that city, who was followed by former Postmaster General John Wanamaker, who bought two. Mr. Wanamaker stamped a letter and placed it in a mail box, to be picked up by a postman in the regular way, to be forwarded to Postmaster General Burleson today when the southbound machine reaches Philadelphia.

Orders issued by the Post Office Department for the new service put the price of air mail at 24 cents an ounce. It is pointed out that this is only 9 cents more than a special delivery letter, and delivery will be made a full hour and a half earlier. Letters must be mailed in New York so as to reach the Pennsylvania Station before 11 o'clock to go by airplane. It is expected that the service, which at present only calls for two planes, with substitute machines, will be increased if justified by the demand.

Everything was in readiness last night for the inauguration of the service from Belmont Park. Two machines of the Curtiss type will be used, each equipped with a 150 horse power Hispania-Suiza motor, capable of carrying from 300 to 600 pounds of mail.

According to the schedule, the plane leaving Washington should complete the journey to Philadelphia, a distance of 135 miles, in one hour and twenty minutes. It will arrive in New York, at this rate, before 2 o'clock. The Postal Service machine was overhauled at Belmont Park last night, and the pilots received their last instructions. Lieutenants Edward Boyle and Walter Miller have been designated as substitute pilots.

The Philadelphia landing site is at Bustleton, near Philadelphia. At Washington the Potomac Park was chosen as a suitable landing place.

GOVERNOR KILLS 79 BILLS.

Vetoes Plan for Investigation of the Rural Schools.

ALBANY, May 14.—Governor Whitman's omnibus veto, recording the death of seventy-nine bills passed during the 1918 session of the Legislature, was made public today. Two of the most important measures which met death were the Martin bill to provide for an investigation of the rural school problem, and the Meyer bill to require non-English-speaking males between the ages of 16 and 21 to attend some public or private day or night school. The former was an attempt to compromise the tangle between Speaker Sweet of the Assembly and the Governor over the repeal of the township school law.

In a memorandum the Governor said that the bills which met death in the omnibus veto failed of approval because they are either "duplicates or unnecessary, or defectively drawn, or are embraced in or are in conflict with bills already signed, or are unconstitutional, or are for purposes which can be suitably accomplished under existing general laws, or should be provided for, if at all, by amendment to the general law, or are objectionable or inadvisable by reason of proposed changes."

During the 1918 legislative session 658 laws were signed, as compared with 809 in 1917.

COLER REVERSES KINGSBURY

Plans to Send All Dependent Children to Institutions.

On the plea of economy Bird S. Coler, Commissioner of Charities, has reorganized the Children's Home Bureau of the department and undone much of the work inaugufurated by the Mitchel administration. Instead of placing dependent children in private homes, Commissioner Coler has started a plan to have them apportioned among charitable institutions, thus saving the salaries of a large number of social investigators appointed by John A. Kingsbury, his predecessor in office.

The expense of the personal service work of the Children's Home Bureau on Jan. 1 was estimated at $49,000 a year. On April 27, when Commissioner Coler had completed his first survey of the change in plan, the cost of maintaining the bureau had been reduced to $19,482. Under Commissioner Kingsbury there was a director at $4,000 a year, three senior social investigators at $1,880 a year, and twenty-two social investigators at $1,080 a year. The same work is now being done by an acting director at $1,950 a year, with a staff of only six social investigators. On January 1 there were 840 dependent children distributed in private homes. At the present time there are only 480 children in such places, the remainder having been placed in regular institutions. Commissioner Coler said yesterday that he did not intend to abolish the bureau entirely, but that he expected to reduce its activities materially.

SIGN OF U-BOAT FAILURE.

France's Offer to Supply Coal to Switzerland Pointed Out.

PARIS, May 14.—An official note issued today, referring to France's proposal to supply Switzerland with coal, says that it is a sign of the decline in the German submarine campaign, for it was only on account of the greater freedom of shipping that it was possible to make the offer.

AMERICAN PLANE FALLS AT FRONT, KILLING TWO

Pilot and Observer Lose Lives When Machine Drops in the Toul Sector.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 14, (Associated Press.)—Falling through the clouds an American airplane crashed to earth, two kilometers behind the American lines, in the Toul sector late this afternoon, killing both the pilot and the observer.

How the machine happened to drop is a mystery that may never be solved. One of three things is believed to have happened; An enemy aviator hidden in the clouds surprised it, a stray piece from a German anti-aircraft shell hit it, or an accident caused it to collapse.

The machine was seen flying over the lines and anti-aircraft shells were bursting around it. Suddenly it swerved upward and disappeared in a fleecy cloud. The next thing observers on the ground saw of the plane it was hurtling downward through the cloudbank toward the ground. The accident was witnessed by several hundred American soldiers in the trenches and gun pits.

THIS IS THRIFT TICKET DAY.

Workers to Push Sale of Admissions to Polo Grounds Festival.

Today is Thrift Ticket Day, or the day when the city will be covered with thousands of War Savings Stamp workers, who will endeavor to sell tickets for the great War Thrift Festival which will take place at the Polo Grounds on June 2. As one of the features of today's activities Harry Houdini will allow himself to be securely strapped in an army straitjacket at 12:30 this afternoon and raised by his ankles up the side of Madison Square Garden. While he is struggling in midair to release himself war savings workers will canvass the crowd in the square for buyers of tickets.

Postmaster Thomas G. Patten made public yesterday an order issued by A. M. Dockery, Third Assistant Postmaster General, calling on all postal employes to press with enthusiastic and organized effort the sale of War Savings and Thrift Stamps. Secretary McAdoo has set $1,000,000,000 as the portion of the war savings loan which he hopes will be sold through the Post Office Department.

Frederic W. Allen, director of War Savings for New York City, appealed to holders of Liberty bonds of the second issue yesterday to convert their coupons into War Savings Stamps.

WILSON RESENTS WAR PLANS INQUIRY

tary Affairs Committee had enough money at hand to conduct an investigation into aircraft.

"We have not the funds to pay traveling expenses of witnesses who will be needed, to make an exhaustive inquiry," replied Senator Hitchcock. "But there's no use worrying about that. The Senate will vote upon the resolution. The Military Affairs Committee will consent, I am quite sure, to leaving out the 'conduct of the war.' That has already been practically agreed upon. Whatever else is needed, the Senate will attend to, whether the Audit Committee reports the resolution out or not. And it may do as it pleases about that."

The Audit Committee is to meet tomorrow to consider the Chamberlain resolution. If the committee fails to report on it to the Senate during the day, it is likely that some member of the Military Affairs Committee will ask that the Audit Comittee be discharged and the resolution brought directly before the Senate. This would start a debate that would test the attitude of the Senate on the prospective inquiry. Senate leaders believe he Milliitary Affairs Committee would be authorized forthwith to go ahead with its aircraft investigation and that ample funds would be voted.

On the Trail of Borglum.

Another chapter was added today to the Gutzon Borglum case, furnished by H. H. Sheets, Secretary of the National Association for Universal Military Training, in a formal statement in which he charged that an agent of the Military Intelligence Service, the army's Secret Service, had sought to obtain evidence from Mr. Sheets as to Mr. Borglum's loyalty and had indicated that Mr. Borglum was employing private detectives.

Mr. Sheets, a friend of Mr. Borglum, was indignant over the action of the military secret agent. He said he had received an apology from the War College Division of the Army General Staff, which has charge of military intelligence work.

Mr. Sheets's statement reads:

"Jan. 26, 1918, a Mr. Baber called on me in my office in the Southern Building, this city, and, as there was a gentleman in my office at the time, asked me to give him a moment privately. The gentleman with me at the time was Daniel Moreau Barringer of Philadelphia, a classmate and lifelong friend of President Wilson.

"I went out into the hall, just outside my office, and Mr. Baber informed me he wanted to secure some information about Gutzon Borglum. (He had shown me his identification card in the office when he first came in; this card proved him to be a member of the Military Intelligence Service of the War Department. He also showed his badge as a Secret Service agent.) The following conversation ensued:

Mr. Baber—What do you know about Mr. Borglum's loyalty? (This after establishing the fact that Borglum was a very personal friend of mine.)

Mr. Sheets—I would as soon doubt my own loyalty as that of Mr. Borglum.

Mr. Baber—Do you think he is patriotic?

Mr. Sheets—Undoubtedly. But why do you ask me these questions?

Mr. Baber—We understand Mr. Borglum is employing agents or private detectives. Do you know if he is interested in any matter connected with airplane manufacture?

Mr. Sheets—I know he has been interested in the inventive field and in experimentation in aeronautics for many years, and that he has fussed around with an invention of his own which has never left the experimental stage. It was a hobby of his, nothing more. But why do you ask me all this?

Mr. Baber—We understand he is employing detectives, and would like to know what he is doing it for, and if he is you could find it out. When you see him again you could ask him: 'Say, Mr. Borglum, what are you employing detectives for?'

Mr. Sheets—Yes, and then what?

Mr. Baber—Why, then you could get into confidential communication with me and tell me what he says.

Mr. Sheets—(Of course, this ended the interview.) If you are the kind of man the Secretary of War is sending out, I shall see Mr. Baker at once and report the whole matter to him. I don't care if you have a whole pocketful of secret passes, you cannot insult me in any such manner. You have asked me to doublecross a personal friend.

"Within an hour after Baber left my office I received an apology from the War College Division of the General Staff for his action."

WANT LIBERTY MOTORS.

British and French Pressing for Thousands for Airplanes.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—American-built Liberty motors may first reach the fighting lines in France driving French and British scouts. Urgent requests from the allied Governments for early delivery of the American engines have been received and are being met. Shipments have already been made to Great Britain, and there are intimations that General Pershing approved diverting additional motors to meet French and British requirements, even if further delay to production of American scouts results.

The British Government, it is said, after careful investigation of the engine by a special expert sent over for that purpose, has been pressing steadily for some thousands of motors to be delivered for use in British machines. The French experts, at first somewhat doubtful of the Liberty, are now asking for and will receive engines by July 1.

Difficulties with overheating, alleged in a letter from Louis Cammen read in the Senate yesterday to make the Liberty motor useless, are declared authoritatively to have been overcome. Radiator troubles have been corrected, it is stated, and the lubricating system improved to the point where no further trouble on that score is anticipated.

To support their view that the day of delays in aircrafts production are over officials point to the fact that last month saw Liberties delivered in hundreds and to present indications that the output will be more than doubled this month and steadily increased thereafter. The output last month, so far as known here was greater than that of any foreign motor with the possible exception of one 130 horse power type used in France. No high power motor, approaching the Liberty 450 figure, was within sight of the American output. It was to reach that end in quantity production, it was declared, that the Liberty was designed.

Another phase of the dispute about the success of the Liberty motor promises to be settled soon by actual trial—that is, its availability for use in single-seated fighting machines. Two machines of this type, one a seaplane, have been designed and built in this country, and will be ready for final trial at an early date. They represent the first efforts ever made seriously to place such high power on the single-seated, short-winged speed machines.

The difficulties facing designers in building Liberty fighters is to get them back to the ground safely at the necessary low speed.

The Caproni airplane, designed in Italy, will be built by the United States as one type of bombing machine. The Caproni has been demonstrated here by Italian fliers, and officials are well pleased with tests that have been made. Experiments are being made with the Caproni plane to determine whether it can be adapted to American motors. Five of the planes have been constructed under the direction of an Italian engineer.

SAYS WHITMAN WILL LOSE

But, Chairman Harris Adds, Governor Will Defeat Lewis in Primaries.

Edwin S. Harris, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, expressed the belief last night that Governor Whitman would win in the Republican primaries but be defeated on Election Day.

"Attorney General Lewis cannot win," he said. "Governor Whitman has too much patronage to make a successful fight against him possible in the primaries. He is using it to the limit, too. All along the Barge Canal and in the Highway Department every laborer who has been receiving $3 a day has been raised to $4.50, the pay for a day and a half, presumably on the assumption that after he is through working for the State he will put in another half day working for the renomination of Governor Whitman in the primaries. There is no warrant in law for these increases which synchronize with the announcement of the coming primary fight. They were ordered purely for primary purposes."

Your Uniform Your Bond

Founded by Richard Cox in 1758—thirty-one years before George Washington became the first President of the United States—Cox & Company's Bank has been inseparably associated with British military enterprise ever since; it has held the appointment of Bankers and Official Agents to the entire British Household Brigade, as well as to the bulk of the Cavalry and Infantry, from the time of the Battle of Waterloo up to the present day.

SIR JOHN LIGONIER.

Reproduced from Military Pass between England and Flanders, granted to Richard Cox, Founder of Cox & Co.'s Bank, by Sir John Ligonier, British Commander-in-Chief in 1749.

At the commencement of the present war, Cox & Company's Bank established a subsidiary in France under the name of Cox & Co. (France), Ltd., through which British Officers in uniform can cash checks on Cox & Co., London, up to the equivalent of £5 (about $25) at any one time, without the formality of establishing identity and signature—a convenience which no other Bank can offer, and which obviates the necessity of carrying ready money or easily-lost letters of credit in the war zone.

To cover the whole of France, a special arrangement was made with the Bank of France, whereby the same privileges were extended to Officers in uniform by all the many hundred Branches of that Bank in places where no branch of Cox & Co. (France), Ltd., existed. The same facilities were also provided throughout Italy at all branches of the Banca Italiana di Sconto.

These facilities, of which practically all British Officers and a number of United States Officers already in Europe avail themselves, are now accorded to all Officers of the American Expeditionary Force, Military, Naval and Air Services, who open banking accounts with Cox & Co., London.

BEFORE SAILING FOR EUROPE, instruct your Banker to give you a draft or to cable you a transfer to Cox & Company, Charing Cross, London. Current accounts are conducted without charge, and interest at prevailing rate is allowed on deposit accounts. International exchange at finest rates.

SAW GERMAN RIFLES IN WAREHOUSE HERE.

RUSSIA TRIED TO BUY THEM

Agent Also Rejected Offer Made by a United States Army Officer.

There were stored in New York City in the Summer or 1916 about 287,000 Mauser rifles believed to have been owned by German subjects, or persons in sympathy with the cause of the Central Powers, according to the testimony yesterday of Francis L. Judd of 224 West Forty-second Street, who in June, 1916, was employed by representatives of the Russian Government to ascertain whether certain persons controlled, as was reported, at various times, 1,000,000 Mauser rifles and about 1,000,000,000 rounds of ammunition, all of which, it was alleged, was stored in New York and other parts of the United States. The witness was heard in the inquiry being conducted by Deputy Attorney General Alfred L. Becker at 51 Chambers Street.

At the conclusion of Mr. Judd's testimony he was asked if he would accompany an agent of the Army Intelligence Office to the warehouse where in 1916 he said the guns were stored, and he agreed to do so, but last night Mr. Becker said Mr. Judd had been unable to find the warehouse.

The investigation, which will probably last several days, was started by Mr. Becker at the request of the War Department in an effort to run down the reports that Germans had war supplies stored in this country. Major Nicholas Biddle, head of the Army Intelligence Service in the New York district, is attending the hearings in an advisory capacity. More than sixty witnesses are to be examined by Mr. Becker, among them several persons of importance, including a prominent woman of German-American stock.

Tells of a Million Mausers.

A man who will probably be examined today is an American who was a business associate in the first months of the war of Carl Heynen, the former German Consul General in Mexico City, who, according to a statement made some time ago by an agent of the Secret Service, is believed to be the man left behind by Ambassador von Bernstorff to look after certain interests the Kaiser is said to have in this country. Heynen is now in an internment camp.

The first witness called yesterday was Edgar A. Holmes, a building contractor of 314 West Seventy-first Street, who within the last few weeks addressed a letter to Dr. Thomas Darlington, ex-Health Commissioner, in which he told of the possibility of obtaining 1,000,000 Mausers at $78 each. He said he had never seen the guns, but that W. M. Ford, a lawyer of 2 Rector Street, would probably be in a position to deliver them.

Holmes testified that he had first been informed of the guns by James H. Crossley, who told him that he had seen boxes containing about 280,000 rifles. The boxes were marked "Krupp-Essen" Subsequent to his talk with Crossley he said he had been introduced by Mr. Ford to a man named Gustav Luessing, who according to the contention of the Attorney General, has said on many occasion to know all about the guns and to be in possession of the names of the real owners. Luessing was in court yesterday and will probably be called to the stand this afternoon.

"I firmly believe," said Mr. Holmes, "that these guns were brought to this country to be used in behalf of Germany in the event Germany triumphed in Europe."

Robert I. Tucker of Charlotte, N. C., testified that Anton Knapp, whom he described as a member of the Russian nobility, had telephoned him last November and asked him to see a man named Adolph Rapskofsky. He did so, and he said that Rapskofsky told him about the guns. Mr. Tucker said that he told the Russian to furnish proof that the guns existed and he would immediately take the matter up with the proper authorities in the War Department at Washington. The information, he added, was not forthcoming and he dropped the matter. Mr. Tucker also testified that he conferred with Luessing about the guns and also with Mr. Ford, who was Luessing's attorney.

Luessing's Lawyer Testifies.

William H. Ford, attorney for Luessing, was next on the stand. He said that Luessing, whom he has represented as counsel for many years, came to his office two years ago and informed him that he represented the owners of 1,000,000 Mausers and a billion rounds of ammunition. He said that Luessing told him he was not permitted to disclose the names of the owners. He said that Luessing had been an American citizen for thirty years.

"Where was he born—in Germany?" asked Mr. Becker.

"I think he was born in Schleswig-Holstein when that province was a part of Denmark," replied the witness.

"Did you ever see any of these guns?"

"I never did."

"Did you ever believe that they existed?"

"I was sure of it until they turned down an offer for them made on behalf of the United States Government by Major Nicholas Biddle of the army. I put this offer up to Luessing, and he said he forwarded it to the owners of the guns. When nothing came of this offer I became convinced that the guns did not exist."

"Did it occur to you that the owners might not wish to sell to the United States, and that it was in order to determine this fact that Major Biddle made the offer?"

"It did not."

"So you never considered that German interests might be interested in this affair?"

"No, I never did."

Later in the hearing Mr. Ford was recalled and asked several other questions regarding the alleged ownership of the guns.

"I object to the insinuation that I am a Benedict Arnold," he exclaimed angrily as he was leaving the stand, "and I wish to say that my great grandfather was the last of my ancestors to come to this country. There is not enough gold in New York or in Germany to buy me."

Says He Saw the Guns.

Mr. Judd, who was called in the afternoon session, said that he is an engineer, and that he saw the guns as a representative of Colonel Kolontieff of the Russian Military Commission in this country.

"Colonel Kolontieff," he said, "came to my office, then at 30 Church Street, in June, 1916, and told me that he had been informed that there was a large number of Mausers in this country which were for sale. He said there was a million of them stored in various parts of the country, but said he had been unable to locate them. At his request I undertook to find out what I could about the guns. I got in touch with some of the people said to know about the rifles, and was taken to a storehouse near the East River. I have forgotten the exact location, and saw a number of gun cases, each said to contain five Mauser rifles. In the same place I saw some Colt machine guns, and a very old Gatling gun. Three cases of those stored in the building were opened for my inspection, and in them were guns apparently new and in good condition. There were about 287,000 guns there."

Harford T. Marshall, a lawyer of 34 Nassau Street, testified that he had acted for the Canadian firm of McCaffrey & Rogers in negotiations opened by that concern to buy the guns. He said that he talked with Luessing, who told him that the guns were owned by certain German-Americans whose names he was pledged not to disclose. He said that he was promised a view of the guns, but that the promise was not kept.

The hearing will be continued at 10 o'clock this morning.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The summary of the Army Appropriation bill, now being drafted finally, issued today by the House Committee on Military Affairs, shows that Secretary Baker, after his visit to Europe, increased the estimates for the army for the next fiscal year by $4,038,753,286.

This increase was made necessary by a decision to expand the army to 3,000,000 and to increase equipment in many details. The tentative bill carries $11,771,666,847.86 which does not include about $4,000,000,000 which will be carried in the Fortifications bill for heavy artillery, making the entire amount which will be provided for the army in the next fiscal year reach about $15,000,000,000.

The Army bill for the present fiscal year was $3,248,654,298.48, which is about $10,000,000,000 less than will be required for the army in the next fiscal year. While an effort will be made to reduce the items in the Army bill proper and the Fortifications bill, it is believed that this Congress will appropriate from $12,000,000,000 to $14,000,000,000 for the army next year.

The summary made public by the committee shows the differences between the original estimates submitted by Secretary Baker and the revised estimates furnished by him after his trip to the battlefields of Europe, omitting those unchanged:

MUST SUPERORGANIZE.

Otherwise Labor Cannot Meet War's Burdens, Says Secretary Wilson.

COLLEGEVILLE, Penn., May 14.—"Labor must be organized as never before," said Secretary of Labor William B. Wilson to day to the graduating class of Ursinus College. "If it takes from six to ten men at home to maintain one man at the front, it means we must be able to maintain them, and we cannot do that without organized labor."

Mr. Wilson declared that if we did not increase our efficiency and organization we would be face to face with the lowest standards of living.

"Till the war is over the patriotic thing to do is to stick to one job," he said. "Only one issue is of importance—to win the war."

Secretary Wilson received the honorary degree of LL. D. in recognition of distinguished services as head of the Department of Labor.

51,600 MORE MEN CALLED THIS MONTH

5,000 FROM THIS STATE

Will Be Sent to Fort Slocum—366,600 So Far Summoned During May.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Twenty-four States and the District of Columbia were called upon tonight by Provost Marshal General Crowder to furnish for the national army 51,609 more men qualified for general military service. The men affected by this call will move to the camps from May 20 to 24, and from May 29 to June 2. These dates were fixed because during the five days beginning May 25 approximately 233,000 men called for recently will be moving to the camps.

Tonight's call marks a further development of the Government's plans for hastening men to France and replacing them as rapidly as they vacate the training centres. In all, 284,600 selected men will be on their way from their homes to military camps between May 20 and June 2. Including numerous calls for technical and especially qualified men, the total number summoned during May is something like 366,600, nearly half of the 800,000 expected to be called this year.

While officials did not explain why only half the States were asked to furnish men at this time, it is understood that the sections to be drawn upon were arrived at through consideration of the proportion of quotas already called in some cases and of the location of vacated training camps.

The camps selected for the registrants affected by tonight's order are not all National Army camps, showing that men are to be sent wherever room may be found for them. In several instances men from certain States are ordered to go to camps to which men from their States are not usually assigned.

DISPROVES SPEED CHARGE.

Miss Peabody Corroborated by Lieut. H. P. Davison, Jr.

Miss Dorothy Peabody of Groton, Mass., who was summoned to the Magistrate's Court at Flushing for driving an automobile at the rate of thirty-seven miles an hour on Broadway, Bayside, Monday afternoon, when accompanied by Lieutenant Henry P. Davison, Jr., of the Aviation Corps and son of the banker now head of the American Red Cross, and Miss Louise Muriel Page of 690 Park Avenue, Manhattan, was acquitted by Magistrate Conway yesterday. Miss Peabody's counsel was Felix A. Jenkins of 14 Wall Street, Manhattan, and on the witness stand swore that the machine was not moving at anything like the speed charged.

Lieutenant Davison appeared in court on a crutch made necessary by injuries sustained when a hydroplane he was operating crashed to the ground. He said he was sitting on the front seat with Miss Peabody, and watched the speedometer all the time, and that it did not point to more than twenty-five miles an hour.

MAKE SACRIFICES, SAYS T. R.

Tells Red Cross Every Man Physically Fit Should Take Arms.

Special to The New York Times.

GARDEN CITY, L. I., May 14.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt told 300 persons in the Garden City Hotel tonight at the opening of the drive of the Nassau County Chapter of the Red Cross for a fund of $300,000 that only the men in uniform were called upon to make the supreme sacrifice for the country and that the soldiers were the only American citizens who should have no regret that they were not doing their utmost for the safety of the nation.

"No citizen should be content unless he is making some sacrifice to aid in the conduct of the war," said Colonel Roosevelt. "The only man who should have no regret over his part is the man in uniform. He is the only citizen called upon to make the supreme sacrifice. It is the duty of every citizen to buy bonds to aid the prosecution of the war and to aid in the great work of the Red Cross.

"It is fifty years since the American people have been called upon to make a supreme sacrifice for the perpetuation of the nation, and the struggle then was in just as great a cause as this struggle against German efforts to enslave the world. It will be a triple shame if the American people of this day fall short of the great record of the men and women who saw the civil war through to the end.

"If we don't win this war we will have another with the same armies on this side of the Atlantic and we will have to fight it without the aid of allies. We must see this war through to victory whatever the sacrifice or the losses we sustain. It is the duty of every American to fight the German, and no man physically fit should remain out of the army when the country needs him."

Colonel Roosevelt is to talk in several villages in Nassau County to aid the Red Cross drive.

BELLS TO TELL RED CROSS DAILY TOTAL

One Peal at 3 o'Clock for Each Million Subscribed During the Day.

WHISTLES ALSO IN CHORUS

75,000 to Parade on Saturday—Red Cross to Send First Letter by Air Mail Service.

Church bells and factory whistles will announce daily next week the progress of the Red Cross drive in New York City. Five hundred sextons gathered at the City Hall last night, the first time in the city that sextons have been organized into a unit, and were instructed in their part in the campaign by Mayor Hylan, William C. Breed, Chairman of the Committee of One Hundred in charge of the Red Cross Drive in this city, and Joseph P. Day, Chairman of the Special Feature Committee.

Every afternoon at 3 o'clock the bells of all the churches will peal in unison, accompanied by factory whistles. This will tell of the first million collected that day. After a pause of five seconds each bell will sound once and each whistle give one blast for the second million, and the additional millions will be counted by renewed choruses at three-second intervals.

Twenty thousand women have already been enrolled for the house-to-house canvasses, making the largest number of women ever assembled in this country to take part in a campaign of this kind.

Ex-Supreme Court Justice Charles E. Hughes, in an exhaustive opinion, indorsed the constitutionality of the law permitting direct contributions from corporations to the Red Cross funds, under which it is believed the Committee on Corporations, headed by Colonel William Boyce Thompson, will collect many millions. Mr. Hughes said in his opinion:

"The question is not one of permitting the use of corporate moneys for what are or may be called worthy objects outside the corporate enterprise, but for the maintenance of the very foundation of the corporate enterprise itself. It is the established policy of the Government that some important activities, such as those of the Red Cross, should be supported independently of Governmental appropriation. This policy is designed to enlist and encourage the active co-operation of the public and does not in any way alter the fact that these agencies are essential to the successful prosecution of the war. It would be, in my judgment, a very narrow and wholly unwarrantable view of the present situation to say that the support of the activities of the Red Cross is not a matter of direct and vital importance to corporate undertakings, and that an act of the Legislature recognizing the plain relation of our military efficiency to the success of business enterprise, and authorizing support by corporations of the agencies having the character described, is beyond the legislative power."

Ex-Fire Commissioner Joseph Johnson, who is in charge of the arrangements for the Red Cross parade on Saturday, promised yesterday that the parade will be one of the greatest spectacles ever seen in the city. The following description of the arrangements was issued yesterday:

"Fully 75,000 marchers will take part in the parade. It will cover a distance of three miles for the Red Cross leaders and aids, and two miles further for the military and naval sections. The route will be from Eightieth Street and Fifth Avenue along that thoroughfare to Fourteenth Street. There all the Red Cross and women's contingents will disperse. The several thousand remaining in line will proceed through Fourteenth Street to Second Avenue, to Houston Street, to the Bowery, to the Williamsburg Bridge Plaza, and then disperse.

"The makeup of the parade units will have all the characteristics of democracy. There will be millionaires and poor men, all animated by the same spirit—the spirit of giving for the relief of suffering humanity. Some of the features will be noteworthy, such as a human Red Cross. There will also be conductorettes and the Motor Corps of the National League for Woman's Service.

"The assembling time is 1 in the afternoon. General George R. Dyer will be Grand Marshal, leading the parade with his staff, and Keith's Band from the Palace Theatre."

It was announced yesterday that a Red Cross letter would be the first to be carried by the new air mail service.

ACTORS' FUND NEEDS MONEY

Daniel Frohman, Re-elected President, Urges Immediate Campaign.

The annual meeting of the Actors' Fund of America was held yesterday afternoon at the Hudson Theatre, and resulted in the re-election of all officers for another year. These are: Daniel Frohman, President; Joseph R. Grismer and F. F. Mackay, Vice Presidents; Sam A. Scribner, Treasurer, and Gus Hill, Secretary. The trustees, elected for three years, are Marc Klaw, Ralph Delmore, Milton Nobles, Harry Harwood, William Seymour, and Frank McKee.

Mr. Frohman, in his address, described the condition of the finances of the organization as "perilous," and urged an immediate campaign in the fund's behalf. The recent Hoge bequest, consisting of property at Fifth Avenue and Forty-third Street, Mr. Frohman said, would not become an asset to the fund for about eleven years, as at present the fund owns only the land. The taxes on the property, Mr. Frohman said, are at present in excess of the income.

Charles Harrison Tweed, lawyer and retired banker, at one time member of the law firm of the late Senator Evarts, who died Oct. 11 last, left an estate appraised yesterday at $1,433,678. The paintings, engravings, and etchings in his home at 12 East Thirty-sixth Street were valued at $40,570, the most valuable being a painting by Monet, $3,000, and one by Corot, $2,500. The bulk of the estate consisted of stocks and bonds worth $1,374,382. His wife, Mrs. Helen W. Tweed, daughter of Senator Evarts, received the household effects, worth $48,900, cash $25,000, and a life interest in two-thirds of the residuary estate. The rest of the estate goes to Harrison Tweed, son, and Katherine Blaine and Helen Wadsworth, daughters.

War Courses at Teachers College.

The Faculty of Teachers College, at Columbia University, announced yesterday that the last two weeks of the college year would be devoted to instruction in war emergency courses to prepare men and women for war work during the Summer. It is expected that many of the students will engage this Summer in Red Cross work in base hospitals, in Liberty bond and war savings stamps campaigns, and in work in social centres. The emergency courses will take the place of final examinations, and all students, except those on probation, who are required to take special examinations, will be required to take several of these courses.

DISCUSS WIDER HOME RULE.

British Talk of Federation—Chamberlain Plea for Ireland.

LONDON, May 14.—In addressing the Women's Unionist Tariff Reform Association today, J. Austen Chamberlain, member of the War Cabinet, said that it was a question whether, in view of the new circumstances, the Unionists should adhere to their former attitude in regard to Ireland. Home rule was not a question for Ireland alone, he asserted, but concerned England, Scotland, and Wales as well.

Mr. Chamberlain said that a solution of the whole problem was urgently demanded, and asked that the facts be looked in the face. He pointed out that there was a Home Rule bill on the statute book, there were pledges to Ireland, and that, whatever plan the Government might bring forward, it was entitled to every consideration in any step it took toward a solution of the problem.

Firm dealing with Ireland, he added, was essential, if a constitutional government was to be restored there, and he said Ireland should contribute her share to the man power necessary to save the empire. Referring to the necessity of strengthening the British armies, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"The Government is not indifferent to peace, but it is idle to talk peace until the great trial of strength has been fought out and the issue decided on the battlefield."

The newly appointed Chief Secretary for Ireland, Edward Shortt, thanking his constituents today for his unopposed re-election to his seat in the House of Commons for Newcastle, said that he would have been content to offer himself for re-election with the simple program of devoting every energy to winning the war and obtaining an honorable and lasting peace. But to attain that end, he added, no step was more urgent than that of bringing peace and unity to Ireland, so that the sister isle might join with her full strength in the fight for civilization. The vote of confidence given him by his constituents greatly encouraged him to that end.

The speech on Sunday in which George Nicoll Barnes, Labor member of the War Cabinet, advocated a federal scheme of home rule for the United Kingdom, has attracted much attention in political quarters here and in Ireland. The lobbyists at Westminster say that the utterance was a "trial balloon" to test the country's opinion and that, although the Government has not decided definitely on a Federal scheme, individual members of the Cabinet, including Premier Lloyd George, are inclining more and more to such a solution of the Irish problem. This is due partly, it is said, to a belief that the scheme affords the only chance of winning Ulster to home rule.

The Daily News credits the Ministers with the opinion that it is the best policy to frame an Irish home rule bill which will be general in structure and which could be fitted into a subsequent act establishing similar Federal Parliaments in England, Scotland, and Wales.

LETS DUBLIN MAYOR COME.

British Government Grants Passports for Trip Here.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUBLIN, May 14.—The Lord Mayor of Dublin has received his passports to America from the Foreign Office, and is arranging to proceed as early as possible to present Ireland's case against conscription.

DUBLIN, May 14.—The Lord Mayor has received passports for America, and arrangements for his immediate departure are in progress. This was announced in a report at a meeting of the anti-conscription conference held at the Mansion House today.

The conference received a communication from a number of representative Irishwomen, suggesting that a woman's day be organized to demonstrate the solidarity of the women of Ireland against conscription. The suggestion was approved.

A dispatch from Dublin on April 19 said that after a conference of representatives of the Nationalists, Sinn Feiners, O'Brienites, and Laborites, it had been decided to prepare a detailed statement of Ireland's case against the Compulsory Military Service act and that the Lord Mayor had been asked to go to Washington to present the statement to President Wilson.

VAUDEVILLE HEADS ACCUSED BY BOARD

Federal Commission Charges That Managers Have Formed an Illegal Combination.

ALLEGE EXCESSIVE FEES

United Booking Offices Say Action Is Due to White Rats' Defeat and Welcome a Decision.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Complaint alleging that the Vaudeville Managers' Protective Association is a combination in restraint of commerce and that it collects excessive fees, dominates the vaudeville industry, and blacklists vaudeville performers who are not in good standing with the association, was issued today by the Federal Trade Commission. The complaint is against the Vaudeville Managers' Protective Association, the National Vaudeville Artists, Inc., the United Booking Offices, Vaudeville Collection Agency, A. Paul Keith, E. F. Albee, Sam A. Scribner, Marcus Loew, Martin Beck, B. S. Moss, and Sime Silverman.

The commission asserts that because of the large number of theatres controlled by the association it is impossible for variety performers to make a living outside of these houses and that through the creation of the monopoly the association has opposed and practically stamped out a former association known as the White Rats Actors' Union and Associated Actresses of America.

Regarding the collection of fees, which is limited by the law of New York to 5 per cent. of the salary paid, the complaint says that the "respondents have a scheme by which performers are required to pay an additional 5 per cent., or more, to 'personal representatives,' these 'personal representatives' being given franchises by the United Booking Offices which enable them to collect fees in excess of the amount allowed by law."

Another allegation is that the vaudeville publication, Variety, is used as a medium for getting the association's propaganda before the performers, and that in return for this service by Variety the association requires that vaudeville performers "patronize the advertising columns of that publication to such an extent that in special issues and holiday numbers it contains about 200 pages of advertising by actors and their 'personal representatives,' which is paid for at the rate of $125 a page."

It is charged also that the association makes and publishes blacklists of performers and theatres and requires its members to employ only performers who are in good standing as members of the National Vaudeville Artists, Inc., an organization the association created to take the place of the White Rats Actors' Union.

The complaint states that the "dominant interest in the Vaudeville Managers' Protective Association is the string of theatres known as the 'Keith circuit,' of which Keith and Albee own the controlling interest."

A representative of the United Booking Offices said last night that the charges referred to in the dispatches from Washington marked the seventh or eighth time that the question of a monopoly had arisen in connection with the Keith and allied interests, and that the opportunity to have the matter settled by a formal decision was welcomed. All disagreements between artists and managers, it was said, are settled by a board of arbitration, and it was declared that a manager is as likely to be penalized by this board as an artist, and that he must abide by its decision. It was also said at the Keith offices that the Washington action is an outgrowth of the recent vaudeville fight in which the White Rats went down to defeat, and that the charges had been made by a group of former White Rats. The hearing will begin in Washington on June 26.

Merchants Elect Directors.

At the annual meeting of the Merchants' Association yesterday these Directors were elected, each to serve eight years: William Hamlin Childs, President of the Barrett Company; Professor Joseph F. Johnson, New York University; Edward D. Page; Henry R. Towne, Chairman of the board, Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company; John H. Love; James M. Beck; H. B. Walker, President of the Old Dominion Steamship Company, and Bertram H. Borden of M. C. D. Borden & Sons.

BENEFIT FOR FRENCH RELIEF

Duchess de Richelieu Gives a Song Recital at Mrs. C. B. Alexander's.

There was a large attendance, with tickets at $3 each, for the benefit of the work of the French Soldiers Relief Committee, at the song recital given by the Duchess de Richelieu yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, 4 West Fifty-eighth Street. The Duchess de Richelieu, who is devoting her voice to the cause of the suffering Frenchmen, has already made more than $50,000 for the tuberculosis fund. She sang charmingly yesterday a variety of songs, which brought applause. There were English, French, and Italian selections, and one of the last was a negro song, "Deep River," by Burleigh.

Great development is being made in the treatment of the disease in France, where the Rockefeller Foundation and the Red Cross are co-operating. There already have been fitted 12,000 beds in the military hospital and sanatoria, and with recent donations twelve new sanatoria, in different departments, have been opened, which will increase the number of beds by 2,000. A training school for visiting nurses has been opened, being a combination of three previously existing institutions.

Want Advertisers to Meet Here.

At the annual elections last night of the New York Advertising Club, 47 East Twenty-fifth Street, the members voted to invite the associate advertising clubs of the world to hold the June, 1919, convention here in New York. New Orleans and St. Paul are both trying to get the convention, which will be attended by more than 9,000 advertising men. The officers of the club re-elected were: George B. Sharpe, President; F. E. Fehlman, Vice President, and D. A. Carrall, Treasurer. Three new Directors were appointed, Hugh Burke, F. A. Lawrenson, and H. H. Charles.

THE RAILWAY RATE ADVANCE.

There will be opposition to the advance of railway rates, of course. If there were to be delay until there was no opposition, there never would be an advance. The advance in the Government's way, the short way, is better than the advance in the Commission's way, if there is to be an advance. Shivering on the brink is folly. A quick plunge will be followed by an invigorating reaction. It will be better for the country because it will be better for the railways. Their interests are indivisible, not opposed. Without efficient railways there is ahead embarrassment both for domestic trade and foreign war. No starved horse ever drew a heavy load, and the railways are a starved horse with a very heavy load.

The advance needed is more than enough to pay the advanced wages, more than enough to pay all increased costs. The advance must be large enough to make up the retarded betterments which it was the policy of the Commission not to allow to be made from rates. When the emphasis was placed on the reduction of rates rather than on the increase of facilities, it was the theory that money should be borrowed for betterments, which, it was held, are properly a charge against capital, not income. But when the emphasis is put on the increase of facilities for trade, it makes little difference whether they come from rates or capital. They cannot come from capital now because the credit of the railways was reduced to the point of insolvency to the largest totals ever known. They must come from rates, the only alternative to taxes under present conditions. There would be greater opposition to little less than a billion-dollar increase of taxes than there would be to a like increase of rates. The taxes could not be shifted. The rates will be shifted, and it is likely will be advanced by more than the sums the producers must pay.

There are profits concealed in the rate increase, as well as burdens put on shippers. It ought not to be so. The increase of prices ought not to be larger than the increase of rates. In fact, the increase of rates ought hardly to be perceptible in prices to consumers, so small a part of costs are railway charges. But the very shippers who object to the advance will find a legitimate advantage as well as irregular profits. Trade will be stimulated enough to recoup the burden of the costs, apart from the recouping of rates by price increases. The advance of rates will enable the railways to finance themselves without overburdening the "revolving fund" or the War Finance Corporation. There is more than enough for them to do, and the restoration of railway credit from railway resources is equitable.

Simultaneously it is announced that the Government will reduce unprofitable railway services. The increase of rates and fares will not be applied to the duplication of facilities in the name of competition. Competition in service now disappears along with competition in rates, which was ended by regulation of rates. At one stroke twelve million unnecessary passenger miles are abolished, and the economies have hardly begun. Hand in hand with these economies will go a great increase in traffic moved. The increases of rates and fares will not reduce traffic. The unification of management will produce more service from the same plant. It is not a question of finding the business to do. The business is clamoring to be done. The sequel to the removal of the embargoes of 1918 will be more agreeable than the refusal to end the embargoes of 1907 in the same manner. There have been ten years of growth lost, which will be made up rapidly. If any mistake should be made, it should be on the side of liberality to the railways. It is always feasible to reduce rates, but it is to be hoped that there will not soon recur the same arguments for advancing them.

The advance in rates with the reduction of uneconomic competition is calculated to lessen the popularity of Government ownership. That heresy rests upon promises which could not be redeemed, and which are more illusory than the abandoned policy of the Commission. It is no longer possible to find believers in promises of increased wages and reduced rates. The increase of rates without the increase of capital works to make railway shares more valuable. Their profits are in proportion to earnings, not capital. That is a fact, and it makes nonsense of the idea that rates should or could be based on capitalization. The railway valuation notion goes into the discard along with the increase of rates. It has cost millions and is worthless. In fact, the losses from the wrong sort of regulation dwarf the billion increase of fares and rates. It would be worth many billions if the railways were now equal to the demands upon them. Their rewards have been lowest when their efficiency has been highest. That state of affairs is about to be brought to a happy end.

HOW ONE "PEACE BY NEGOTIATION" RESULTED.

When the Kaiser "assumes" that "Lithuania will participate in the war burdens of Germany," he means that he commands it. This command, disguised as an "assumption," is delivered in his proclamation recognizing Lithuania "as a free and independent State." A more ghastly piece of hypocrisy has seldom been perpetrated even by the Kaiser. How is Lithuania to "participate in the war burdens of Germany"? As the officers of the Lithuanian National Council at Washington pointed out yesterday, Lithuania cannot furnish either money or munitions, and "therefore Germany can have reference only to men."

Thus the Kaiser recognizes this "free and independent State" merely as a new source on which to draw for the men he is feeding by the hundred thousand into the furnace of destruction on the west front. Already he is calling out boys only just above mere childhood in Germany; but the supply of boy soldiers cannot last forever, and his need is more men, constantly more men, more and more lives with which to keep on with his desperate gamble. Therefore he has turned greedy eyes on Lithuania; and he now orders her to drive her manhood into his machine of destruction, and in return invests her with the empty and mocking title of "a free and independent State." This, men and pacifists, is what comes of negotiating a peace treaty with Germany.

THE WEAK SISTER.

"Dear SIXTUS'S" royal and imperial brother-in-law KARL, having honored the Italian front with his presence, left for the German Great Headquarters, the Chief of Staff and the Foreign Minister with him. There negotiations have been undertaken that will decide the future relations of Germany and Austria-Hungary. A military and customs union is talked of. There are to be negotiations for a pragmatic alliance; "pragmatic," presumably, in the family and dynastic sense, as in the so successful Pragmatic Sanction of CHARLES VI., that guaranteed the integrity of the Hapsburg lands, was accepted by Prussia, and broken at the first opportunity by FREDERICK the Great, who invaded and grabbed Silesia "in order to manifest his "friendship with the House of Aus-"tria."

A tumble-down House now held up, economically and militarily, by the Hohenzollern. What is the political situation in Austria? The financial and economic situation can go only from worse to worst. But yesterday we heard that the population of Galicia was dying of hunger and its Socialist Deputies had demanded the immediate importation of Polish grain. Of the condition of Austrian political feeling this same Vienna correspondent told his paper a little while ago:

> One cannot get rid of the fact that a majority of the Austrian [Austro-Hungarian] nationalities and their representatives are against the State as now constituted.

There is nothing new in that, it may be said. We know that the Czechs and the South Slavs demand national States of their own, the union of all their people and lands in Hungary and in Austria, the dissolution of Austria-Hungary. We know that the Magyars, now reviving, for obvious reasons, their old campaign for a separate Hungarian Army, and the Germans of Austria, with, for the moment, the Polish aristocratic or landlord class, are the sole strength of the Hapsburg Monarchy, the sole support of the alliance with Germany. Moreover, for twenty years the German Socialists of Austria have favored "national autonomy," which Dr. VON SEIDLER, the Austrian Premier, has declared himself in favor of, but not at all in the way the Czechs and South Slavs understand and are resolved to have it. It is a personal, not a territorial, autonomy that he plays with national societies of Czechs and South Slavs.

There is nothing in that, and the German Austrian Socialists have been influenced by the Russian Revolution to accept the doctrine of national self-determination. According to a well-informed writer in The New Europe, "among the German Socialists in "Austria, Bolshevism is growing "visibly," and the Arbeiter Zeitung "openly declares its sympathy with "the Bolshevist Revolution and bit-"terly criticises the German counter-"revolutionary expeditions into Fin-"land and the Ukraine." A year ago the Austrian German Socialist Party, with its organ, the Arbeiter Zeitung, was imperialist. Apparently Austria's Ukrainian ambitions are accompanied with certain reactions from the duped and overthrown Bolsheviki. Austrian prisoners of war, returning home from Russia in great numbers, are more or less infected with the Russian disease. They are interned in camps, political disinfection camps, so to speak, for some weeks. The Austrian Minister of War has told the Reichsrat that he had proofs, "and not isolated proofs only," that there "is a fairly considerable num-"ber" of converts to Bolshevism and propagandists of revolution among these home-coming soldiers. So, with half a dozen irredentisms, Socialists and irredentists approach one another. The Czechs and Slavs accept agrarian reform. Bolshevism is not without missionaries. What with these, with copious martial law, economic distress and what not, it is no happy Austria-Hungary that KARL and BURIAN must now get bolstered up, as best they can, by Germany. Apparently only the military success of Germany can save the Hapsburg Monarchy from collapse.

JAMES GORDON BENNETT.

It is hardly too much to say that the first JAMES GORDON BENNETT, one of the most vigorous and cynical of the great figures on the personal stage of American journalism, was the founder of the modern newspaper. He was an alert collector of news. He saw the possibilities of the telegraph. Reporting, however more variously and competently done in our time, may be said to have begun its modern phase in that meagre old Herald of the 30's, regarded as a portent or a scourge, a thing of evil, by the respectabilities and conservatisms of the time, more because it was an innovation than because of any resemblance to such Yankee newspapers as DICKENS, in the anti-American novel of "Martin Chuzzlewit," urbanely characterized as The Rowdy Journal and The Sewer.

It was a great and prosperous newspaper that the second JAMES GORDON BENNETT inherited in 1872. It was the best newspaper property in the United States. All things considered, The Herald was probably the best known American newspaper at home and abroad. At any rate, the younger BENNETT soon made it more famous. The Stanley expedition to Africa and the Jeannette polar expedition are the classic examples of his enterprising and active spirit. His fondness for polo and yachting and coaching, his interest in social affairs, all his enthusiasms, all his prejudices, fantasies, whims, were reflected in the newspaper which for the most part he conducted and ordered from abroad.

He was a man of salient, and in many respects attractive and strange, personality. He was full of "humors," as the Elizabethans called them. His newspaper was the vehicle of all his old or new interests, whimsies. Many of his supposed eccentricities were deliberate, jokes on the public, surprises. There was a sort of logic under many of his queerest performances. One felt that he loved to dazzle and jolt and startle, épater, his readers. If his devotion to the metric system bored some of them, the great world of cynophilists was touched by his unfailing attachment to the friend of man. If his anti-vivisection views were a weariness, one forgot them in the kaleidoscopic processional whirl of enmities and friendships, of taboos and reticences and panegyrics, typographical or rhetorical peculiarities, a whole system of mystification, annoyance, or amusement, ordained by Mr. BENNETT, who never lost a sound newspaper sense, but who ran The Herald, and expensive congeries and branches of it, in London and Paris, solely for his own personal satisfaction and according to his own sweet will.

Born to the purple, strong-willed, arbitrary, he was an absolutist, a sort of newspaper Sultan from Bagdad of "The Arabian Nights." As men of business, most newspaper proprietors try to give their readers what their readers want. Mr. BENNETT gave them what he wanted. He amused himself. He ruled his newspaper with a Sic volo, sic jubeo, touched often with no unkindly humor; and with a sort of systematic method in his madness. Was any newspaper better advertised? The faithful reader wondered what Mr. BENNETT was going to do next.

Many things testified to his shrewdness as a newspaper man. That Sunday sermon, so long preached, was it not originally a concession and a temptation to the foe of Sunday papers, a pulpit at a Summer beach, so to speak? And who ever regarded the weather, that one powerful loosener, more potent than wine, of human tongues and shynesses, that root of polite conversation planted before NOAH was a sailor, with such benevolent attention, after consultation of so many barometers and thermometers, as Mr. BENNETT? There was a deeper sagacity in this than was generally recognized. It was Mr. BENNETT'S whim. Yes. Are they playing polo in Biarritz today? To how many of the workaday world these little whiffs from happier climates and the Coast of Azure were an escape, a change, givers of holiday by proxy!

On the great outlines of newsgathering Mr. BENNETT was usually of sound judgment. While the sums which he spent on the collection of news in the days of his prime were large for that period, they were small compared with the constant ordinary cable and telegraphic expenses of the great newspaper of today. Touched with his genius, his idiosyncrasies, or his faults, as his Herald was, it never ceased to interest, if often it puzzled or vexed its public. Particularly was it, at its best, an old New York institution. It took bodily form in that gracious copy of a Verona palace that has been its home for nearly a generation, a building New York will be loath to lose. There Mr. BENNETT, with his genius for advertising, drew strangers and sojourners for years. It is a show, an exhibition, a demonstration.

In politics Mr. BENNETT was an opportunist, or, shall we say, a collector of statistics with little other interest than to see the winning side, unless some of his antipathies were aroused. Never did he use the power and influence of his paper for personal ends. That from his yacht or apartment or villa he could so impress his image and superscription upon every number of The Herald; that it continued through all the fluctuations of journalism, more Bennettian the more it changed; that under the apparent disadvantages of remoteness and absence he was always omnipresent in The Herald office, indicates the strength of his temperament and character, even if any critic may object to his methods. He was a sort of Fairy Prince to the last. A hundred legends, a rich apocrypha, surround already one of the most peculiar, most willful, most mystifying of men, a man of singular charm, when he chose to be. He had his own way through a long life. Something else he might have been, something more edifying and puritanic, something less original. People thought of him as an idler. What editor worked harder? He played hard as he worked hard. He got out of life what he wanted. A vivid figure, such as a novelist could not invent, and yet that seems too fanciful for actuality.

THE INCREASED SHIPPING PROGRAM.

The appointment of Mr. SCHWAB has put a new color on the shipping situation. Others were unable to accomplish their own program. He proposes to increase their plans by half. He is not proposing to save money, nor to waste it, but he is going to produce ships at a rate which will make it a pleasure to see the money go. Others could not find labor or materials. He finds no shortage of either. He has no hard words for anybody. He praises his predecessors, and has not words enough to praise the riveters and other workmen who are accomplishing near-miracles. There was need of this spirit of buoyancy, if the shipbuilding program were to be redeemed from the atmosphere of bungling and despondency which has surrounded it, however undeservedly.

Mr. SCHWAB'S words are not idle boasting. He is a man who has accomplished such results within the limitations of private capital that he can work wonders with the United States Treasury to support him. The country has come to understand that the war cannot be won with billions of dollars. What is wanted is "goods and services" in exchange for dollars. The transmutation of money into work is the job before those charged with the winning of the war. There is no shortage of dollars. Yesterday four billions were "found" at Washington by a duplication of appropriations. One of them can be canceled and applied to shipbuilding or anything else. If another Schwab could be found for the production of airplanes, the country would be pleased to see the billions spent, and the spending would spread prosperity in many related trades.

Mr. SCHWAB'S reward is not in dollars. He is working for what he is receiving—the appreciation of his countrymen and a place in the history of his times. He is only one among many, including not a few under indictment, who now are the right hands of those who prosecuted them, and who now are glad of their help, and who see no harm in their methods when the public is the beneficiary. Business peace at home is one of the by-products of the war against autocracy abroad, and is a welcome credit against debits so enormous.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Allegiance Must Be Unconditioned.

Gratitude is due to Judge HAIGHT for having hewed with courage and, without the slightest concession to sentimentality to the line of national allegiance in the case of FREDERICK WUSTERBARTH, a man who was naturalized thirty-five years ago and has been living here ever since. For all that time he was until recently recognized as a good citizen and seemed to deserve such recognition. But when the United States entered the war WUSTERBARTH instantly separated from his neighbors, or from such of them as were not of like origin and mind as himself. He did not, indeed, indulge in any overt acts against the United States or its allies; all that is charged against him is that he expressed the hope that Germany would win and that he refused to do anything whatever that would tend to prevent or delay her victory.

Often, and too often, it has been admitted among us that from a citizen of German birth, or even of German descent, little or nothing in the way of sympathy for Germany's present enemies was reasonably to be expected—that he was to be excused and almost to be commended for answering the racial call to the extent of standing apart from other Americans and leaving to those others the task of carrying out the national policies in so far as they involved the injury of Germany and the killing of Germans. All such flabby theorizing Judge HAIGHT swept aside.

He went straight to the oath taken by all foreigners, Germans not less than the rest, when they apply for American citizenship, and declared that when one of them, later, failed to show complete loyalty to his adopted country he revealed that when he swore allegiance to the United States it was with a mental reservation that made the oath of no value and constituted perjury. WUSTERBARTH'S naturalization was declared to have been obtained by fraud and his "papers" of no effect.

The German who has been posing as an American was therefore declared to be a man without a country, unless Germany cares to take him back, and he now comes under all the restrictions imposed on the other enemy aliens among whom he rightly belongs. Thus is upheld the sound principle that those who are not with us and for us are against us, and shall be treated as what they are.

Interpretation Can Solve This Problem.

Governor WHITMAN'S doubt as to the constitutionality of the so-called anti-loafing law is probably shared by not a few other people, including some who are in no personal danger of having its provisions enforced against themselves. It is not that all of these doubters, or even most of them, are expert in the exposition of constitutional law; they simply feel that a statute so subversive of all established custom and accepted ideas ought to be unconstitutional and therefore is.

There is some force in this sort of reasoning, but complete confidence cannot be placed in it. At least tending to vitiate its conclusion is the necessary assumption that the Constitution was drawn with the intention of protecting and perpetuating the Government, and that it guards no "rights" inimical to the country's existence and prosperity. The Constitution recognizes, too, that in time of war many privileges properly held important, or even sacred, at other times, must be temporarily abrogated or suspended. Among them very well may go the old ideas as to what constitutes "vagrancy" and "visible means of support," as well as the notion that the man with money enough to be safe from the poorhouse is at least excusable if he does not work—is even to be commended for not earning an unneeded wage and so taking it away from somebody who cannot live without it.

But all justifications of idleness fail when it is the country that must have more workers, and when a speeding up of production is a national necessity. In ordinary conditions the "man of leisure" is not always the parasitical creature he is sometimes called, but now he is one, no matter how great the fortune he has earned or inherited. The chances are, therefore, that the anti-loafing law will stand the test of the courts in this State, as it has already done in New Jersey and Maryland, and that other States will soon follow the example set by these three in holding unemployment at useful labor a punishable misdemeanor.

It certainly is a moral and economic offense, and uningenious, indeed, would be the Judge who did not decide that what must be done can be done.

His Argument Is Not a Sound One.

One of our correspondents draws a plausible distinction between expenditures that involve the present performance of labor and those that do not. He therefore holds guiltless the man who, even at this time, pays a great price for an old picture, while he condemns him who hires men to enlarge a house already big enough, or who, to gratify luxurious tastes, gives employment at tasks irrelevant to the conduct of the war.

Our correspondent says, truly enough, that in the first case there is a mere transfer of money from one man's pocket to the pocket of somebody else, and that the available supply of productive labor is not affected, while in the other the country suffers by the absence from essential industries of workers who might and should be transferred to them from the luxury trades.

In the drawing of this distinction, however, at least one thing was forgotten. The man who buys the old picture does, indeed, only transfer money from one pocket to another, but incidentally he appreciably decreases the probability that all or any large part of the money transferred will be devoted directly to forwarding national interests. He has lessened by the extent of his purchase his own ability to buy Liberty bonds, for instance, when he makes an acquisition of this sort, and he does not proportionately increase the ability of somebody else to buy them. The somebody else is sure to have less spare, or sparable, cash than he had himself before he bought the picture or other product of dead-and-gone artists.

No excuses for unnecessary or extravagant spending in wartime can endure the test of close examination and analysis. They stand on a level with the pleas for "business as usual," and that level is a low one—too low for the good and loyal citizen to stand on.

To Force the Use of English.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

One of the reasons given by the German press for the continuance of their publication in this country in the German language is that there are a number of "German-American" citizens who can only be reached through newspapers printed in German, because they do not understand English. If that is so, how can they be American citizens? As I understand the naturalization laws, a man must be at least able to understand the English language to be a citizen of the United States. Before this country declared war on Germany the German press throughout the country was distinctly pro-German, using all its influence with its readers on the side of Germany. Does any one believe for a moment that its sympathies for Germany have changed, and are now anti-German? On the contrary, it is a fact that the German papers have stopped German propaganda in their columns because they are forced to do so by the fear of this Government, and the further fact that we are now at war with Germany. The quickest way to teach any "German-American" the English language, which is the language of this country, is to take away the German newspaper and thus force him to read English. In the light of all the barbarism of which Germany stands convicted today, the sight of a German printed newspaper in the United States is an offense to Americans.

THE GERMANS IN FINLAND.

The Red Guard Insists They Are Not There for Order or Justice.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of today appears a letter from Mr. Herman Montagu Donner, an apologist for the Germanized "White Guard Government" of Finland, distorting facts about the Finnish situation. I think a sense of fair play toward the Finnish people in their bitter struggle for freedom entitles me to a reply.

Mr. Donner's apologies for the German invasion are invalidated by current Associated Press dispatches. If his "White Guard Government" really represented the desires of the Finnish people it would not have been hiding in the sparsely-settled northern part of Finland before the Kaiser's army came to its aid. If the people wanted it, it would not have found it necessary to summon Prussian cohorts "to preserve order." If it were at all interested in liberty or democracy, it would have had no dealings with the German junkers. Today the "White Guard" leaders are laying plans to do away with the general suffrage in Finland and set up a monarchy with a German Princeling on the throne. This is current news. If Mr. Donner can square this with democracy, very good.

Mr. Donner intimates, in spite of this, that the "White Guardists" are not pro-German. I have before me a recent copy of Kaleva, the official "White Guard" organ, containing a copy of a long telegram sent to the German Chancellor by the "White Guard" Prime Minister on March 1, lauding the Kaiser as the exponent of "German Kultur" and "defender of the Lutheran faith" and extolling "the glorious deeds of the German people and their illustrious leader." The telegram invites an invasion. It recalls in glowing terms "all that Germany has done for the Finnish chasseurs who three years ago today voluntarily entered the military service in Germany." There were several thousand of these chasseurs.

Mr. Donner quotes an alleged message from United States Consul Haynes at Helsingfors, purporting to justify the German invasion. He intimates that the Haynes statement came from Washington. It did not. It appeared in a cable report from Stockholm, where so much pro-German "news" about Finland emanates. Recently a report from similar sources had the Czar re-established on the Russian throne.

Mr. Donner, whose German invaders have been reported murdering Finnish men and women by the thousands, makes much to-do about "Red Guard" atrocities. There have probably been atrocities on both sides in Finland. If America had inherited a ruling alien aristocracy which betrayed the country to the Germans, it is quite believable that here and there a few of the traitorous rascals would be severely treated by the people. But the fact remains that the revolutionary Government, (the so-called Red Guard Government,) adopted stringent measures to curb such overt acts, while General Mannerheim, the German-named and German-minded "White Guard" leader, boasted that his men took no prisoners. The leaders of the "Red Guard Government" in Finland are not, as Mr. Donner intimates, bandits and "anarchists." They are men who had represented the democratic movement in Finland for years. Most of them have served several terms in the Diet. They were the leaders associated in the Finnish Government after the last legal election in 1916, at which the Socialists, for ten years numerically by far the largest party in Finland, had a clear majority in the Diet.

Mr. Donner commends the "democracy" of Old Finland, particularly in relation to the elected "House of Burgherrs," one of the Four Estates. Yet no manual worker could sit even in that house. The franchise was based on income, and a large portion of the population was wholly without the franchise, while the wealthier citizens had several votes, in some cases even as many as twenty-five. That is a curious sort of "democracy."

It is perhaps difficult for an American non-Socialist to realize why the democratic movement in Finland takes a Socialist form. It is because feudal institutions have been preserved there up to today. No mere political reconstruction could avail to change the rigid feudal structure of society. A complete economic and social reconstruction is necessary if real democracy is to be. For many years, with the aid of the brute force of Czarism, the Finnish junkers succeeded in keeping their feudal control. It is quite natural that they should now turn to the Kaiser and the German junkers, with whom they are in entire sympathy.

Mr. Donner compares the tragedy of Finland to that of Belgium and Serbia. From his point of view the comparison is unfortunate. Surely he cannot expect Americans to believe that the bestial, ruthless military power that crushed Belgium and Serbia has entered Finland to uphold order, social justice and democracy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the clear and valuable account of the new military course at Princeton, printed in your issue of May 12, there is, however, one misapprehension of fact which should be noted. It is the statement that "Latin and Greek will no longer be required for entrance to Princeton." The Latin and Greek entrance requirements stand exactly as before, with the one exception that boys of proved superior ability in mathematics, physics, and chemistry may enter the B. S. course without Latin.

"Jeanne Darc" in Old French.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your inspiring editorial article of today (Sunday) on "The First French Nationalist" you use the words "Joan of Arc, as the Maid of Orleans is curiously called in English." You might have added that Jeanne Darc, not D'arc, is the approved French spelling, which goes back to the pre-seventeenth century form of the name.

THE WAY TO BERLIN.

The way to Berlin is the Will-to-Win.
Firmly it stretches out
Over quicksand fears and blasted years,
Over marshes of woe and doubt.
Like a silver path for God's own wrath
Across the slime of sin,
It finds the gate of the Lord of Hate,
In the royal palace, Berlin.

It passes from Avenue Lift
Through the Thoroughfare of Grin-and-Bear,
Across the Lane of Thrift;
Then winds along through Hopeful Song
Toward the Summit of Never-Give-In,
From which it leads through the Road of Deeds
To the royal palace, Berlin.

The way to Berlin is the Will-to-Win
And all of us belong
On that Only Way—a great array
Of a hundred million strong!

FAVORS MAIL TUBE SERVICE.

Senate Directs Burleson to Buy Systems Against His Wishes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Against the opposition of Postmaster General Burleson, the Senate today, by a vote of 33 to 23, adopted an amendment to the Postal Administration bill directing the Postmaster General to purchase the pneumatic tube mail systems of New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Boston, St. Louis, and Chicago. An appropriation of $4,432,622 was voted for the purpose.

Postmaster General Burleson fought the purchase of the mail tube systems on the ground that they had not proved as serviceable as the truck delivery system. Senators who supported the amendment argued that the pneumatic tube service had proved itself efficacious, and that Chambers of Commerce and Boards of Trade in all the cities involved had urged their purchase by the Government.

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts attacked Mr. Burleson's opposition to taking over the mail tube systems.

"It is a fallacy to suppose that the postal service is simply for the amusement of the Postmaster General," he said. "It's not for his individual use, but for the people."

Senators Wadsworth and Calder of New York supported the amendment, arguing that to throw out the mail tube system in New York and resort entirely to truck delivery would result in terrific congestion of the mail-carrying facilities.

"New York is already overcrowded with street traffic," said Senator Wadsworth. "If we throw out the tube system and rely upon the mail trucks, we shall only make matters worse."

LANDON TO SPEED AIRCRAFT.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—John D. Ryan, the new Director of Aircraft Production, announced today that Archer A. Landon of Buffalo, Vice President of the American Radiator Company, had accepted an appointment to have charge of the production division.

"Mr. Landon has had wide experience in directing production on a large scale," said Mr. Ryan. "For many years he has been intrusted with that responsibility at home and abroad for the American Radiator Company, which operates a large number of plants in this country, and before the war was one of the largest American manufacturers in Europe.

"It is felt that Mr. Landon's wide experience and great ability will materially advance the production of aircraft. He has already entered upon his work."

MANY PAY FOR BONDS IN FULL

Total Receipts for Third Liberty Loan Now Are $1,017,000,000.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Third Liberty Loan receipts today, amounting to $624,000,000, indicated that thousands of subscribers have paid in full for their bonds, instead of the 5 per cent. required on subscription. Total Third Liberty Loan receipts now are $1,017,000,000.

Some Federal Reserve Banks reported total subscriptions to the Treasury today, but national results probably will not be available for a day or two, owing to the multitude of untabulated subscriptions still in the hands of a few Reserve Banks.

War Savings Committees throughout the country will make strong efforts tomorrow to persuade persons about to cash interest coupons of the Second Liberty Loan to invest the proceeds in War Savings Stam

MINOTTO INQUIRY PUSHED.

Case Against the Count Is Based on New Information.

CHICAGO, May 14.—New information not connected with the deportation proceedings last Fall is the basis for the Presidential warrant under which Count James Minotto, son-in-law of Louis F. Swift, packer, was arrested yesterday, according to Hinton G. Clabaugh, Superintendent of the Local Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice. Mr. Clabaugh said that the investigation was continuing.

Count Giulio Bolognesi, Italian Consul General in Chicago, today came to the support of Count Minotto and declared there was no question that Minotto was an Italian citizen.

District Attorney Clyne said that if it was proved that Count Minotto was an Italian citizen he would enjoy all the rights of such citizenship. The Count, now at his father-in-law's country estate at Lake Forest, Ill., is at liberty on $50,000 bond pending a hearing May 20 on a habeas corpus action instituted in his behalf.

PLAN FOR ITALY'S DAY.

Girl Scouts and Kindred Societies Will Distribute Bouquets.

Plans for the nationwide observance of Italy-America Day, May 24, the anniversary of Italy's entry into the war, were announced yesterday by the Italy-America Society, of which Charles Evans Hughes is President. Each city will commemorate the event in its own way, but the slogan for individuals will be: "Wear flowers to signify America's friendship for her Italian allies."

At the headquarters of the Italy-America Society, 165 Broadway, it was said that large quantities of flowers would be distributed free. The Society of American Florists has called on florists to act as clearing houses for the flowers. Tied with the Italian colors, boutonnières will be distributed by hundreds of girl scouts and members of the junior auxiliaries of war organizations which are co-operating with the Italy-America Society.

"The Italians are intensely patriotic," said Francis Markoe, Chairman of the Flower Committee of the celebration yesterday, "and it will hearten them and renew their faith in themselves to know that the thoughts of Americans are one with theirs on May 24. The simple wearing of flowers for Italy will go a long way toward undermining the German propaganda in Italy, which is striving by perverted intelligence to mislead the Italians into the belief that this country is careless of Italy's fate."

Mr. Hughes made public yesterday telegrams received from the Governors of Rhode Island, Texas, Ohio, and Kansas. All promised to lend their aid toward making the day a success.

The officers of the Il Cittadino Company, an Italian newspaper with offices at 498 West Broadway, in the name of its readers have presented President Wilson with two statues in bronze, symbolizing the soldiers of America and Italy, and King Victor Emmanuel is to receive a similar gift as an expression of admiration of the paper and its readers for the heads of the two nations.

DALY NOW CHIEF INSPECTOR

Enright Announces Permanent Appointment to Head Police.

Inspector John Daly was appointed by Police Commissioner Enright yesterday to be Chief Inspector of the Department. He had been the acting Chief Inspector since early in March, when the then Acting Chief Inspector, James E. Dillon, retired from active duty. Ever since the retirement of Dillon there has been much speculation as to who would be the head of the uniformed men.

Chief Inspector Daly is fifty-nine years old and has been on the force for thirty-two years. He was appointed as a patrolman on Feb. 3, 1886; was made a Sergeant in 1891; a Lieutenant in 1896, and a Captain in 1903. He reached the rank of Inspector nine years ago.

The Inspector has done excellent work, and he was several times chosen to clean up districts where vice was rampant.

BARGE CANAL OPENS FOR TRAFFIC TODAY

Inland Waterway Connecting the Hudson with Great Lakes Has Cost $150,000,000.

Expected to Relieve the Freight Situation Here and Expedite Food Shipments from the West.

ALBANY, May 14.—The new State Barge Canal, completed at a cost of more than $150,000,000, will be opened to through traffic between the Hudson River and the Great Lakes tomorrow. Formal observance of the opening will be held later, probably on July 4, the Legislature having made an appropriation for a celebration and authorized the Governor to appoint a commission to arrange the affair.

The main line of the Barge Canal, which follows in part the route of the famous old Erie Canal from Troy to Buffalo, is 352 miles in length, and the tributary Oswego and Cayuga-Seneca canals give an additional mileage of 100. The Champlain Canal, connecting Lake Champlain and the Hudson, is 80 miles in length, making the total mileage of the New York system of navigable inland waterways 532.

The main line is the only direct water route between the Great Lakes and the Atlantic seaboard. Traffic experts and engineers estimate its capacity as 10,000,000 tons of freight annually, equivalent to 500,000 freight carloads. Control of the canal traffic was taken over by the Federal Government on April 17 in connection with the administration of all transportation lines.

All of the channels have the same general dimensions, the minimum depth being twelve feet and the width varying from seventy-five feet at the bottom of the earth sections to 200 feet in the beds of the canalized rivers and lakes. In the construction of the waterway all available streams and lakes have been utilized, including the Mohawk, Oneida, Seneca, Oswego and Huron rivers, and Oneida, Cayuga and Seneca lakes. There are fifty-seven locks in the canal, having an inside measurement of 300 by 44 feet. The largest lock, at Little Falls, has a lift of 40½ feet, and at Waterford there is a series of five locks with a total lift of 169 feet.

In its entirety the canal essentially is a river canalization rather than a land line. In order to meet the demand for increased draught and deeper channels the water level of the rivers and streams has been raised by artificial dams, of which there are thirty-nine, some fixed and some movable. Channels in the river and lake section have been marked by buoys and lighthouses.

In the construction of the Barge Canal more than 100,000,000 cubic yards of rock and earth were excavated and over 3,000,000 cubic yards of concrete have been used in constructing locks, dams and retaining walls.

In speaking of the opening of the Barge Canal State Engineer Williams said last night:

"New York State throws open to the use of the public the greatest potential improvement in the State's transportation system since the last trunk line railroad was built within its borders, some forty or fifty years ago. The best thing about the Barge Canal is that it is available now, when it is so urgently needed. It seems almost providential that a great transportation agency, equal to a trunk line railroad, should be opened at this time, when increased facilities are in such great demand to handle the country's food products, implements of war and supplies of coal.

"The work was of great magnitude, and contained engineering problems of greater complexity than those which the engineers, under General Goethals were called upon to solve at Panama. The designing of the structures and all construction work was placed in the hands of the State Engineer and Surveyor, and that officer has been the responsible head during the whole period required to carry out the project. Other departments and boards have had more or less to do with some phases of the work, but the State Engineer has been the actual construction head."

G. A. Tomlinson, General Manager New York Canal Section of the United States Railroad Administration, announced yesterday that all was in readiness to operate the Barge Canal. Unusual importance attaches to the opening of the canal this year, as it marks an effort on the part of the Government to relieve the abnormal freight burden, due to war conditions, now being borne by the railroads from the West centring in this city. In speaking of the opening of the Barge Canal yesterday General Manager Tomlinson said:

"We shall start 75 boats from here and 25 from Buffalo. Within a week there will be 165 vessels moving, or at least that many as soon as they are released from present storage contracts. I have today let contracts for 50 steel barges, with the promise that delivery will begin within 45 days. Next week it is proposed to let contracts for concrete boats, how many I do not care at this time to specify.

"We have made considerable bookings of grain and flour for the barges, and expect to find cargoes for the boats both ways. We are issuing through bills of lading for the canal and the Great Lakes, and the canal and the railroads. These bills of lading will be the same kind as those issued for shipments on the railroads, since the administration of both the canal and the railroads is now centred in the Federal Government.

"Arrangements are being made for the use of one of the piers in lower New York City, and we hope very soon to install a local merchandise service covering all local points between Buffalo and Albany."

The barges this season will be hauled through the canal by tugs, but later on many will be equipped with motive power so that one large may tow a string of non-power boats.

It is believed at the Inland Waterways offices that large quantities of grain, cereals, and flour will move East this Summer through the canal to New York, and that a great deal of freight in the form of manufactured products can be loaded on the boats for the return trip.

CARDINAL SEES GOOD IN WAR

O'Connell Says It Has Banished Rampant Capitalism Forever.

BOSTON, May 14.—"Americans must keep America safe so that what happened in Russia cannot happen here," said Cardinal O'Connell, addressing the annual convention of the State Council, Knights of Columbus, today.

"The day of rampant capitalism has gone forever in Europe and America," he continued. "If this war has done nothing but open the eyes of the people to their own rights, then the blood of millions has not been spilled in vain. A few men took the entire resources of the world, and were then surprised and amazed because socialism and anarchy became rampant. There is a new spirit in America today. It is the spirit of true democracy."

The Cardinal read President Wilson's proclamation setting apart May 30 as a day of fasting and prayer, and said:

"We can't fail when the Executive of a nation, in these times, turns to God in language such as that."

Daniel J. Gallagher, State Deputy, announced that more than $400,000 had been collected in Massachusetts alone for the war work of the Knights of Columbus at the front.

READY TO DEMAND CREEL'S DISMISSAL

SLUMMING REMARK OFFENDS

Called Second Insult to Congress from Same Source—Cannon and Moore Sarcastic.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The House today again concerned itself with the public utterances of George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information. Representative A. T. Treadway, of Massachusetts offered a resolution calling for an inquiry by the Committee on Rules into a statement attributed to Mr. Creel. Representatives Joseph G. Cannon and J. Hampton Moore, in speeches, assailed Mr. Creel for his New York loyalty speech.

Mr. Treadway said he was impelled to offer his resolution because of the second "insult" Mr. Creel had offered Congress. The first, he said, was his remark that Mr. Treadway had misrepresented mail conditions. This was contained in a report submitted to Congress by Postmaster General Burleson, who included in the report a comment by Mr. Creel about the activities of Representative Treadway in the foreign mail matter.

The latest remark attributed to Mr. Creel credits him with having replied to a question whether he thought there was any loyalty in the hearts of Congressmen:

"I do not like slumming, so I will not inquire into the hearts of Congress."

It was this reflection upon Congress which led to the introduction of the resolution and to attacks upon Mr. Creel by several Congressmen. Representative Treadway's resolution follows:

"Resolved, That the Committee on Rules be instructed to make a proper inquiry into statements alleged to have been made by George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, in remarks made at a public gathering in New York, May 12, in which he is quoted as referring to Congress in the following words: 'I do not like slumming, so I will not inquire into the heart of Congress,' and to report to the House what action it would advise in the premises."

Ready to Ask Dismissal of Creel.

Mr. Treadway, just before the House adjourned, declared he was prepared to move for a report demanding Mr. Creel's dismissal. He said in support of his resolution:

"This House should accept this man at his own words. I append the newspaper accounts of a statement made by Mr. Creel in New York on Sunday, which are evidently accurate reports on his remarks:

"The New York World: 'I don't like slumming, so I won't explore into the heart of Congress.'

"The New York Sun: 'Creel * * * added that he was not out slumming, and did not propose to explore the hearts of members of Congress.'

"The New York American: 'I don't like slumming, so I am not going to explore the heart of Congress.'

"The New York Tribune: 'I don't like slumming, so I won't explore the heart of Congress for you.'

"In a letter given to the press by Mr. Creel, addressed to H. G. Whigham, editor of the Metropolitan Magazine, New York, Mr. Creel writes:

"'We consider it right to spend that money (referring to funds of the Committee on Public Information) to defend the Government and its war measures from misstatements that weaken the faith of the nation in the nation's war work.'

"I have had one controversy with this man, which was in no way of my seeking, for which Mr. Creel was properly rebuked, so the account is square, so far as I am concerned; but as one of this body I am jealous of its fair name before the world. When any employe of the Government makes such a statement as I believe Mr. Creel did in New York, he is entitled to proper rebuke, especially in view of his own statement to Mr. Whigham. Such remarks as he made tend to discredit Congress before the nation and the world, and should not be lightly passed over by this body."

Wonders If It's Worth While.

Representative J. Hampton Moore said it was impossible for Congress to discipline Mr. Creel, as he was expending money out of the billion Congress gave to the President to expend at his discretion. Some members of Congress, said Mr. Moore, are taking the matter entirely too seriously.

"So far as Mr. Creel is concerned, I wonder whether the candle is worth the game," he said, to the merriment of the House.

In debate on the Overman bill Representative Cannon said:

"History will take care of itself. Lincoln never dreamed he would dwell as he will dwell in history. McKinley, Garfield and Cleveland, all of these people who have been President, will dwell in history to a greater or lesser extent.

"And if there be mistakes, honestly made, as we journey along in this great struggle, the people will be magnanimous. They will say, we could not get ready in a minute, we had to have experience, we had to have preparation, we were not ready, and there was not any of them, so far as I konw, that did not regret our want of readiness, thank God, except Creel.

"If I wanted to give any advice to this Administration, I would say, take Creel by the seat of the breeches and the nape of the neck, and throw him into space."

"Only yesterday the Democratic leader referred to one of the creatures of the Government," said Mr. Moore, "who acts under executive authority and takes the liberty of reflecting upon this body—the Director of Publicity, more or less useful to the President. We may expect more of this kind of procedure after the Overman bill is a law."

FIRST RAID ON IDLERS TO BE UP BROADWAY

Authorities Ready to Round Up Work Shirkers the Moment Governor Gives the Word.

ALL COMMEND NEW LAW

Federal Officials Expect to Catch Many Draft Evaders—Actors Out of Jobs in No Danger.

The moment Governor Whitman by proclamation puts in force the anti-loafing law Assistant District Attorney Smith's plain-clothes army, automobiles and all, will conduct a fast-moving raid up Broadway to rid that thoroughfare of idlers, draft dodgers, and other unemployed undesirables. Mr. Smith announced yesterday that he had a list of 100 men who for years had loafed along the Rialto, and that he planned to serve subpoenas on them, requiring each to prove why he should not be put to work for the duration of the war.

Mr. Smith declared that for four weeks he had kept a large force of detectives busy along Broadway and the Bowery, gathering data on the work slackers. He said there were blocks in Broadway that, day in and day out, held the same set of idlers, and that his detectives would have no trouble nabbing violators of the law. He said that reports in his possession indicated that there were more than 10,000 men liable to prosecution under the new law in Manhattan alone.

After he cleans up Broadway's sidewalks, Mr. Smith will get after the young men who spend their time in chop-suey restaurants, poolrooms, and dancing resorts. As he construes the law he is not empowered to arrest paid dancing men in the Rialto's tango rooms. He said yesterday, however, that he intended to fall heavily upon the dapper men patrons of such places.

As the result of evidence picked up by his investigaters, the Assistant District Attorney will also invade Greenwich Village. While, Mr. Smith said, he planned to do nothing that would disrupt the artistic or literary institutions of the village, he would scour the circles, the red inkeries, and the garrets in search of the idlers who, apparently pursuing art, are in reality running away from work.

While Smith's raiders will be touring Broadway, the Bowery, and Greenwich Village, plainclothes men from Headquarters will begin a watch at ball parks, and in motion-picture houses. Commissioner Enright said yesterday that the movies were a favorite resort of the chronically unemployed, and that he expected to make big hauls in the small theatres.

In the suburbs the enforcement of the law will be left largely to the Sheriffs. As a result of a suggestion made by District Attorney Swann the Sheriff of Queens will attend the opening of the Metropolitan racing season tomorrow at Jamaica, L. I. It is expected that many violators of the law will be discovered among the track hangers-on.

That the law is already making itself felt was indicated by the many letters, mostly anonymous, which District Attorney Swann received yesterday, telling him where to find idlers. Mr. Swann also had a visit from a representative of the Actors' Union who requested a ruling on how the law would affect the players during the Summer layoff. Though the act stipulates that every man between 18 and 50 years shall "habitually work at least thirty-six hours every week," Mr. Swann said actors had nothing to fear under the law.

"The law was designed to catch the man who doesn't want to work," said the District Attorney, "rather than the willing worker who is temporarily out of employment. We shall not adopt any violent measures in dealing out the law. While we shall treat the idle members of the Fifth Avenue clubs just as we shall treat members of clubs in Tenth Avenue, we shall not enter clubhouses after suspects. Rich and poor will be treated alike; we are after undesirables, no matter where they may be. Every man should consider himself enlisted in these times, and should do his best. The new law is a war measure, and it should be considered from two angles; it is aimed to back up the military efficiency of the nation by increased production, and it aims to effect a general clean-up by getting hold of corner loafers and crooks."

One effect of the law, Sheriff David H. Knott said yesterday, has been to flood him with applications from men seeking positions. The Sheriff said he was willing to aid all he could, and called attention to a provision of the law which affords a legal avenue through which all persons who come under the law may obtain jobs.

"The law provides, said the Sheriff, that every one, after unsuccessfully trying to find a job, must register at the Bureau of Employment of the Department of Labor, at 530 Fifth Avenue. Idle persons must do this within thirty days after the law goes into operation. Sheriff Knott said that persons who failed to register within the required time would be liable to a fine of $100, or three months in jail, or both.

Both United States District Attorney Caffey and Chief Charles De Woody, the latter of the Department of Justice, yesterday gave the new law their unqualified approval. Chief De Woody said the roundup of loafers would bring to light many draft-dodgers and deserters, while Mr. Caffey declared the additional evidence adduced against draft evaders would hasten their departure to service or to the Federal penitentiaries.

Chief Magistrate McAdoo, pledging Commissioner Enright the fullest cooperation of the City Magistrates in the enforcement of the law, said he regarded it as likely to result in "the greatest metropolitan housecleaning this city has seen in many years."

"Aside from the highly desirable utilization of labor to meet the exigencies of the war," he said, "compelling these loafers to do some work for the general good and their own is a very commendable thing. It will be especially effective against the menacing army of vicious, degenerate, criminal and semi-criminal idlers who prey upon women, tout for gamblers, and all sorts of vicious resorts, terrorize neighborhoods, and frequent questionable dance halls and the like."

Since the beginning of war, Magistrate McAdoo said, there have been many complaints by citizens, with sons or brothers at the front, against the seeming immunity certain classes of young men enjoyed. He said that while the Magistrates would conduct the preliminary hearings in cases arising under the law, final jurisdiction would rest with the Court of Special Sessions.

While the Manhattan authorities waited, the police in Brooklyn yesterday started enforcement of the law. Late in the afternoon three policemen under Sergeant Hyland of Headquarters, raided the poolroom conducted at 850 Third Avenue by Paul Demario, arresting him and six patrons. Pending the Governor's proclamation the arrests were on the technical charge of disorderly conduct, though Sergeant Hyland said the anti-loafing crusade had prompted the raid.

In the Fifth Avenue Court later Magistrate Folwell discharged five of the men, held Demario in $300 bail for examination today, and sent Thomas Marlotto, 15 years old, to the Children's Court on a charge of juvenile delinquency. The Magistrate said if he had had a certified copy of the Anti-Loafing law before him when the prisoners were arraigned he would have sentenced them to six months.

M'GRAW'S MEN REVIVE IN TIME TO CAPTURE FINAL GAME FROM BUCCANEERS

GIANTS BUNCH HITS TO DEFEAT PIRATES

PITTSBURGH FIGHTS HARD

In Last Few Sessions Barnes Finds Work Cut Out to Gain Victory by 3 to 2 Score.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, May 14.—By assiduously picking away at the offerings of Frank Miller in the early innings of the fray, the Giants earned a victory in the closing game of the series with the Pirates today, 3 to 2. It was well for McGraw's men that they did their scoring early, for in the waning innings they found it impossible to dent the platter, while Jess Barnes was hit quite freely by Bezdek's crew and just managed to get by. Eight hits were made off Barnes's delivery, six of them in the last four innings.

The Giants hopped on Miller in the second inning. Fletcher opened the brief but effective fusillade with a single to left and Holke followed with an infield blow. McCarty advanced the runners with a perfect sacrifice, and Rodriquez, who was dropped to eighth place in the batting order, belted the ball to the centre field corner of the lot for three bases, scoring Fletcher and Holke.

In the third inning McGraw's men again got to Miller and scored their third and last run of the game. Kauff crashed a double to right centre, a screeching drive that was held to a two-bagger only by the superb fielding of Casey Stengel, who took the ball as it carromed off the bleacher fence. Burns was thrown out on a grounder to McKechnie, Kauff reaching third. Zimmerman hit to Cutshaw, whose throw to the plate was late and Kauff dashed over the rubber.

Up to the sixth inning Barnes pitched shutout ball, allowing only two hits, but in the sixth the Pirates nicked him for a brace of tallies and came mighty near snatching the victory away from the league leaders. Mollwitz died on a fly to Kauff, but Carey drew a pass and Stengel singled to centre, putting Carey on third. Cutshaw's torrid smash glanced off Fletcher's shins into centre field for a hit, Carey scoring, and on King's single to centre Stengel crossed the plate. McKechnie forced King and then stole second, and Schmidt was purposely passed, filling the bases. Bill Hinchman batted for Miller, but was thrown out by Zimmerman.

Bob Harmon took up the pitching burden for the Pirates in the seventh, but gave way to Bigbee as a pinch-hitter in the ninth. Bigbee singled and reached second, when Zimmerman threw out Caton, but was left stranded when Mollwitz fouled to McCarty and Carey flied to Kauff.

VAUGHN'S RECORD BROKEN.

Braves Defeat Chicago Southpaw in Game, 5 to 0.

CHICAGO, May 14.—Jim Vaughn's winning streak was broken today when Boston bunched hits behind some erratic fielding and shut out Chicago 5 to 0. Vaughn had won five games without a defeat this season.

Rehg wrenched his ankle in sliding into second base and had to retire from the game.

WASHINGTON, May 14. — Sunday baseball will be played in Washington, starting next Sunday, May 19, by American League clubs. The Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia today legalized the playing of professional games on Sunday by rescinding prohibitory regulations. The large increase in the population of the district since the war and the need of providing recreation and amusement were given by the Commissioners as the reasons for their action.

FABER BLANKS ATHLETICS.

World's Series Star Proves Puzzle to Mackmen.

PHILADELPHIA, May 14.—Faber defeated Perry in a pitching battle this afternoon, Chicago winning, 3 to 0. The first hit off Perry followed a pass to Murphy, and Gandil's sacrifice fly scored the winning run. Gandil drove in Chicago's second run with a double, and scored the final tally on J. Collins' single.

Faber held Philadelphia hitless for six and two-thirds innings, not a man reaching first. With two out in the ninth, singles by Jamieson and Kopp, a wild pitch, and a pass to Walker filled the bases, but Burns grounded to McMullin.

REDS BEAT DODGERS IN AN EXTRA INNING

Successive Singles by Lee Magee, Roush, and Sherry Magee Down Brooklyn.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, May 14.—After paving the way to a Brooklyn victory in the fifth inning today, Sherwood Magee suddenly turned in his track and pounded out two blows that gave Matty's crew their second straight victory over Robinson's men in the abbreviated series that closed here this afternoon. It took the Reds ten innings to turn the trick with a 2 to 1 score.

Both Griner and Smith pitched good ball. The latter held the visitors to two scattered hits up to the fifth, when the Dodgers found him for two singles, which, combined with Sherwood Magee's error, gave them their opening tally. Myers, first up, singled to centre. On an attempt to catch him napping Magee dropped Smith's toss and Myers went to third, scoring a little later on Johnston's single to centre.

After Hickman sacrificed, a freak double play followed on Schmandt's grounder to short. Blackburne threw to Groh to get Johnston. Groh ran Johnston back to second, tagged him out, and then tagged out Schmandt, who sought to annex second on the play.

Griner held the Reds to three scattered hits until the eighth, when singles by Groh and L. Magee, Roush being hit, and Sherwood Magee's single tied the score. Three successive singles in the tenth gave the Reds the game. After Groh lined to O'Mara, L. Magee, Roush, and Sherwood Magee singled in fast succession and the game was over.

CORNELL WINS FINAL GAME.

Baseball Team Ends Season with Victory Over Niagara, 4 to 2.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 14.—Cornell closed its baseball season with a victory over Niagara University today by the score of 4 to 2. Although Needle, who pitched for the Ithacans, was touched for nine hits, most of them were scattered infield taps.

Howard's muff of Smith's grounder in the third, allowing two runs to cross the plate, prevented the Cornell pitcher from obtaining a shutout.

A single by Ensworth, followed by doubles by Howard and Whitmore, tied the score in the sixth, and in the eighth a double by Ensworth, a base on balls to Whitmore, and a double steal sent the winning runs across the plate.

The score by innings:

BOXING CARNIVAL PLANNED.

Array of Ring Stars May Meet for Red Cross Benefit.

Madison Square Garden will be the scene of the greatest boxing carnival ever held in New York, if the plans now being arranged by a number of local followers of the ring sport, materialize. It is proposed to hold a combination boxing entertainment and concert in Madison Square Garden on Friday night, May 24, at which the leading boxers of the country will appear and the entire proceeds will be donated to the Red Cross. This spectacle is to furnish one of the features of the Red Cross drive.

Two matches have already been arranged. These will bring together four of the leading lightweight boxers of the country. Frankie Callihan, the Brooklyn boxer, and Willie Jackson, the Bronx lad, will be opponents in one bout, while in the other Johnny Dundee, the Italian lightweight, will oppose Eddie Wallace of Brooklyn.

William Fox is directing the proposed carnival, and it is said he has received assurances that the boxing exhibitions will be permitted. The contests are to be strictly on their merits, conducted as were bouts held under the now dead Frawley law, and with no semblance of "exhibitions."

In addition to the two bouts arranged others are in the making. Initial steps have already been taken to have Billy Miske of St. Paul, Fred Fulton of Minnesota, and Jack Dempsey of Salt Lake City, appear in a bout, the plans being to match Miske and Dempsey, or Fulton and Dempsey, or Miske and Fulton.

Another bout under consideration would bring together Jim Coffey, Ireland's heavyweight, who is now in the navy, and Frank Moran of Pittsburgh, now boxing instructor at Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, S. C. Efforts will also be made to secure a match between Soldier Bartfield, the local middleweight, and Mike O'Dowd, the titleholder, now a member of the army. Negotiations have been opened with Irish Patsy Cline of Harlem and Lew Tendler of Philadelphia, lightweights; Frankie Burns of Jersey City, Joe Lynch of the west side, and Pete Herman of New Orleans, the country's three leading bantamweights, looking to matches in which they will be principals. Jess Willard, world's heavyweight champion, will also be asked to appear.

TWO GAMES FOR COLUMBIA.

Stevens and Fordham to be Played at Baseball.

Columbia has baseball games with two local colleges this week. The first comes this afternoon when the Light Blue and White will meet the Stevens nine on South Field. On Saturday Coach Coakley will take the Columbia boys to Fordham Field, where they will play a return game with the Bronx collegians. A game with Lafayette, scheduled for Memorial Day at South Field, will be the last game of the season for Columbia before the annual commencement day fray with Penn.

MULFORD IN AUTO RACE.

Veteran Driver Enters for Harkness Handicap at Speedway.

Ralph Mulford, one of the pioneers of the automobile racing game, last night entered for the Harkness Handicap, which is to be the feature of the ten-event speed carnival to be held at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway on Decoration Day. Dario Resta, Barney Oldfield, Louis Chevrolet, Arthur Duray and Ira Vail will be among his rivals.

An effort is being made to sign up "Daredevil" Dave Lewis for the big race. W. H. Williams expects to hear from the Chicago driver within a day or two as to his plans for the coming season.

17 COLLEGES ENTER MEET.

Harvard and Pitt Only Absentees from I. C. A. A. A. A. Games.

Seventeen colleges have entered teams for the annual track and field championship games of the Intercollegiate Amateur Athletic Association, to be held at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, May 31 and June 1. While the total number of competitors has not been computed as yet, officers of the association express keen pleasure at the prospect of large fields and close competition at the two-day meet, which will be revived after a lapse of a year.

The University of Pittsburgh and Harvard University are the only two members of the association which were expected to enter teams, and failed to forward a list of entrants. In the case of Pittsburgh the absence of entries is a surprise to followers of college track athletics. The lists closed on Saturday in conformity with the I. C. A. A. A. A. constitution, and the only means whereby Pittsburgh could now enter a team would be by a two-thirds vote of consent at a special meeting of the association and a fifteen-day notice of such a meeting must be given in order to make the same constitutional.

Another surprise was the entry of a team from the University of Michigan, which recently rejoined the Western Conference League, and will compete in the big ten games on June 8 in the Middle West. The Wolverines have a small group of high-class performers, and should the points be well distributed at Franklin Field, Michigan may succeed in winning the championship in what will probably be her final appearance in Eastern college athletics in some seasons.

The list of colleges which have entered teams follows: Amherst, Columbia, Cornell, Dartmouth, Fordham, Haverford, Georgetown, Johns Hopkins, Lafayette, Massachusetts Tech., Michigan, New York University, Pennsylvania, Penn. State, Princeton, Swarthmore, and Yale.

CHINESE NET STAR BEATEN.

BOSTON, May 14.—W. L. Wei, tennis champion of China, now a student of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was defeated by E. Hendrickson of Amherst, national indoor champion, in a semi-final match of the tournament of the New England Intercollegiate Lawn Tennis Association today. The score was 3—6, 8—6, 3—6, 6—3, 14—12.

H. Brookman, Jr., Massachusetts Institute of Technology, defeated R. R. Larmon, Dartmouth, 6—4, 5—7, 6—3, 9—11, 6—3. The defeat of Wei and Larmon was a surprise, as they had been picked by the spectators to appear in the finals.

Rain caused a postponement until tomorrow of the play in the doubles.

CHICAGO LOSES GOLF MATCH

Evans-Ouimet, Hutchinson-Barnes Event for Providence.

Instead of the gala golf event of the season going to the Chicago district as at first arranged, plans now being completed are to hold the big event at the Wannamoisett County Club, near Providence, R. I., May 26. At that time, and over that new but popular course, it is expected that Chick Evans, the national amateur champion, paired with Sergeant Francis Ouimet, the Western amateur champion, will meet Jim Barnes, Western open champion, and Jock Hutchinson, winner of the last national patriotic open tournament.

The match as now tentatively arranged is to be a thirty-six hole, four-ball best-ball affair. The two amateur leaders of the country have signified their willingness to take part and Barnes also has agreed. Barnes further states that he will guarantee that Hutchinson will be on hand for the match.

Young Hackenschmidt Wins Bout.

Young Hackenschmidt last night defeated Louis Nelson, claimant of the welterweight wrestling championship title, in a finish match, catch-as-catch-can style, at Bothner's Gymnasium, in 2 hours 57 minutes 20 second, with a toe hold.

TWENTY-SIX NAMED FOR THE PREAKNESS

Pimlico Three-Year-Old Classic Attracts Such a Big Field It Is Divided.

PIMLICO, Md., May 14.—The Preakness Stakes for three-year-olds, which was arranged to provide an attraction at Pimlico to rival the Kentucky Derby, bids fair to eclipse the old-time clasic, according to indications on the eve of the running of the event tomorrow. The race has been so well supported by Eastern sportsmen that when the entries closed today twenty-six thoroughbreds were named to compete over the mile and a furlong route. This would make an unwieldy field, but the generosity of the Maryland Jockey Club was equal to the occasion, and the announcement was made that the event would be run in two divisions, with $15,000 in added money put up for each division. This will render the Preakness the largest added money event in the country.

It appears probable that the track tomorrow will be muddy or at least heavy. This way cause a few withdrawals, and one or two others also may drop out by three owners selecting only one of their entries to carry the colors. Figuring, however, on twenty starters, the race would be worth $35,000, including the $250 starting fee. There are four moneys, with the winner of each division earning about $12,500, the second horse will receive $2,500, the third, $1,500, and the fourth, $1,000.

There was some disappointment when it was found that George W. Loft's Papp, which was next in standing to Sun Briar as a two-year-old, was not named to start. The Futurity winner has been coughing and Trainer Maxey Hirsch decided to reserve him for his many important engagements later in the year. A. K. Macomber's War Cloud, which ran fourth in the Kentucky Derby, occupies the post of honor for the first division, but even if he stands the journey from Kentucky he may not go to the post, as he showed he had no liking for a heavy track at Churchill Downs.

With War Cloud out, G. D. Widener's Lanius is fancied for the opening part of the event because of the excellent race he ran on Monday when he won the Southern Handicap and defeated several of the other candidates. George Starr, recently purchased by Wilfred Viau and which has won four races in Maryland, will also receive support, as will A. H. Morris's Quietude, whiche has shown winning form here.

In the second division W. E. Applegate's Jack Hare, Jr., apepars to stand out. He was one of the leading two-year-olds last season and has shown great form in his preliminary races, which included a very fast mile won from good company.

The entries follow:

The Preakness, (first division,) for 3-year-olds, $15,000 added, one mile and a furlong. War Cloud, 117 pounds; †Flags, 107; ‡Bravardo, 107; Nutcracker, 107; Game Cock, 107; Lanius, 110; †Johren, 107; ‡Man of the Hour, 107; Sunny Slope, 107; *Zululand, 107; George Starr, 107; Quietude, 102; Foreground, 107; Mary Maud, 102; *Orestes, 107; †Whitney entry; ‡Parr entry. *Diaz entry.

TWO FOR MRS. JEFFORDS.

Kerensky and Dr. Johnson Each Triumph at Pimlico.

PIMLICO, Md., May 14.—The feature of the racing here today was the Piping Rock Aspirant Plate for two-year-olds, which the Maryland Jockey Club took over when the Locust Valley organization decided to forego racing for this season. The weather did not favor a big field for this subscription event, but the muddy track was all in favor of Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords's Kerensky. This colt is a son of Plaudit, noted for siring mud runners, and he simply revelled in the going.

W. R. Coe's Uncle Lassie cut out the running for the first quarter, with Mrs. J. E. Davis's Ophelia next in order until the stretch, where Ophelia went to the front. Ambrose meantime had rated Kerensky along, but when straightened out for home he began to gain and took command at the sixteenth pole to win easily by a length.

Mrs. Jeffords secured double brackets by starting her Preakness candidate, Dr. Johnson, in the Sudbrook Park Purse, at six furlongs. There was some good opposition, Currency trying to make a runaway race of it and opening a big gap in the early stages. Dr. Johnson kept in a good position next to the leader and, taking the lead in the final eighth, won handily by a length from E. B. McLean's Leochares, which, after running in deep going, came with a rush at the finish and was beaten only a length.

The summaries:

GROTON, Mass., May 14.—Henry Sturgis Morgan, youngest son of J. Pierpont Morgan of New York, has been elected Captain of the Groton School crew for 1919. He rows at No. 6 in the shell, but future races have been canceled because most of the members of the crew have signed up for farming units. Morgan will enter Harvard following his graduation.

RICHARDS ADVANCES IN TENNIS TOURNEY

Reaches Semi-Final Round in Harlem by Beating Bowman —Bassford Defeats Hartman.

Although there was not an overabundance of play in the continuation of the Harlem Lawn Tennis Club open tournament yesterday, the progress of the event was enlivened by two matches of more than ordinary worth. Both advanced players into the semi-final round of the competition, and in each instance the bracket was attained only after the playing of a three-set match. The fortunate contestants were Vincent Richards, the national boys' champion, and Henry Bassford.

Richards won his place in the foremost rank by defeating Herbert L. Bowman with the score 6—1, 4—6, 6—3. It had been anticipated that this match would be one of the best of the tournament, and in every way it lived up to expectations. Richards played a game of surpassing quality, in which steadiness was the outstanding factor. His work was well rounded and Bowman found in the opening clash that despite the years in his favor he was opposed by a rival of skill and stamina and that he would have to call upon his best tennis in order to make even a creditable showing.

Bassford's victory was over Ingo Hartman. This was a merry contest from start to finish, with the result in doubt until the playing of the last point. Hartman won the first set at 6—4, but he was forced to give way before his antagonist in the next two sets after they had been carried to deuce several times. Bassford's victory was scored at 4—6, 7—5, 10—8. In the last set each player pressed forward with his best supply of strokes and the rallies were sharply contested.

In the semi-final round Bassford will meet the winner of the H. R. Hathaway-J. S. O'Boyle match, and Richards will be pitted against the winner of the contest between William T. Tilden 2d and A. Von Bernuth.

The scores:

Second Round—C. E. Buchner won from L. L. Cook, by default.

Third Round—Ingo Hartman won from C. E. Buchner by default; A. Von Bernuth defeated Paul Martin, 6—2, 6—4.

Fourth Round—Henry Bassford defeated Ingo Hartman, 4—6, 7—5, 10—8; Vincent Richards defeated H. L. Bowman, 6—1, 4—6, 6—3.

Summer Evening Wraps.

For evening wear during the coming Summer months, it is said that long capes with deep circular collars of crêpe meteor or of satin are going to be very popular. For the body of these wraps, georgette seems to be the fabric most generally favored by buyers. Solid colors are popular as usual, and there is reported to be a good demand for black and white combinations. Various small figured designs in soft evening shades are also selling well. Embroidered decorations are being used a great deal, and on quite a few of the models long fringe is employed for trimming.

Diamonds Are Much Wanted.

A record demand for diamonds is told of in this market, in spite of the war, higher prices and the difficulty that is experienced in getting stones of the quality formerly required for American use. In fact, wholesale buyers of diamonds are in many instances faced with the problem of either taking goods that they would not have considered before the war or going without anything. The small diamonds used in various kinds of ornamental settings are especially scarce, their shortage, as well as that of the larger stones, being attributed to the temporary elimination of most of the prominent European diamond-cutting centres as market factors as a result of the war.

It's Up to the Designer.

"Next Fall, more than ever before, designers will have to be depended upon for new and attractive coats and suits," said a leading manufacturer of these garments in this city yesterday. "Not only are materials scarce and hard to get, but from all indications there will be very few, if any, new novelty fabrics. Designers, therefore, not only must strive to use less materials in their creations than they have been in the habit of doing, but they must develop winning, modish effects of sufficient originality and distinction to make up for the lack of a variety of new fabrics."

Gray Goods Prices Hardening.

Prices continued to harden in the local gray goods market yesterday with the gradual elimination of second hands as the leading sellers and, while in several instances mill asking prices have not been paid since the recent era of high quotations, most of them are now back where they were at that time. The mills were asking 20 cents for 39-inch 68-72s yesterday, but spot sales were made of Southern goods of this construction from second hands at 19. May-June deliveries of 39-inch 56-44s were sold by first hands at 15 cents, while Fall River let out some 38½-inch 60-48s at 15¾ cents for this month's shipment. There was not a great deal done in sheetings during the day though the sales made included second hand 48-square, four-yard goods at 23 cents for immediate delivery. Mill asking prices for printcloths closed this way:

39-inch, 68-72s....20c	38½-inch, 60-52s..16c
39-inch, 56-44s....15c	38½-inch, 60-48s..15¾c
38½-inch, 64-64s..18¾c	27-inch, 64-60s....12¾c

Fall Coat Styles.

Conservatism seems to be the keynote in the designs of most of the early showings of women's coats for next Fall and Winter. Some very original and becoming treatments of materials have been developed, but as a rule the general silhouette is only slightly, if at all, changed from last Winter. One feature which seems to be played up with particular prominence is the long front and back panel effect. Another attractive coat is made close fitting above the waist line and with a gathered skirt. Collars are large and frequently of fur. Patch pockets in novelty shapes are shown. The materials most seen so far are wool velours, broadcloth, and several novelty plushes.

Novelty Cottons in Skirts.

There is an unusual demand for separate skirts made up in various novelty cotton fabrics, according to reports from several large manufacturers in this city. Most of these garments are of a type suitable for sports or semi-sports wear. They are made with wide borders of beautiful embroidery, which is sometimes white and sometimes in bright colors. Wide separate belts are popular with these skirts, and are frequently embroidered in design and color to match the border. One type of skirt which is particularly in favor is made rather full around the hips and drawn in at the waist to fit the figure. While large patch pockets are still seen, it is said that set-in vertical or oblique pockets are becoming more the vogue.

Fall Dress Goods Sales Large.

An advance Fall business of unusual proportions has been done by local jobbers of dress goods, one of the best-known houses having written on the books on the first day of this month nearly twice as much business as was done in the entire month of May last year. This situation, and others like it, has grown out of a fear on the part of retailers of the most marked scarcity of this kind of goods that the trade has ever seen. That they have done right in "getting in" early is the opinion of a very well-known jobber, who has practically called a halt on selling for Fall because he has orders already for about all the goods he knows he can deliver. In the opinion of this man, there will be a merchandise famine in the trade in about three months that has never been paralleled, a condition that will be augmented by the entire absence of production for civilian consumption for the next several months, on the part of one of the country's largest concerns.

The Sampling Season Is at Hand.

The sampling season is at hand with the wall paper trade, and the next couple of weeks will find the manufacturers hard at work making up the lines that will be shown at the annual exhibition here in August. In spite of the war and the scarcity of labor, &c., it is understood that most manufacturers are planning to bring out as comprehensive lines as ever, and those who are "in the know" intimate that the new designs will be the best ever put on the market by domestic producers. The sampling process, which is long and more or less tedious, consists of working up various color combinations for the patterns in hand and proving them on the printing machines. This often entails considerable correction of shades, tints, &c., and requires considerable skill and knowledge of color values.

"Summery" Gems Are Popular.

"Summery" gems are in great vogue at the moment, and this is reflected in the demand that is experienced locally for such semi-precious stones as aquamarines, tourmalines—mostly green—amethyst, and topaz. Green and purple form the leading color combination in gems at the moment, and amethysts and tourmalines are frequently coupled up to obtain this effect. Aquamarines are far and away the best sellers for afternoon and evening wear, while for wear with tailored garments there is a run on the tourmalines and amethysts. Topaz, ranging from golden to dark brown, is popular, the golden topaz especially because it resembles the canary diamond. Sapphires lead the demand for precious stones, and are often seen in combination with tourmalines. Many of the sapphires are square cut, for use in bracelets and other ornamental pieces.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Railroads Have Their Turn While Industrials Meet Profit-Taking—Money Easy.

The reaction which was due yesterday after the almost uninterrupted rise of several days in the industrial list lost much of its effect in the face of the overnight news bearing on the railroads, and while it resulted in a loss of 2 points in some of the most active steel issues from the high prices made at the opening, or soon afterward, the aspect of the market as a whole was decidedly strong. The report that the Railroad Administration had decided upon the need for an advance of 25 per cent. in freight and passenger rates did not come as a complete surprise, since intimations of an increase of this size were put out coincidentally with the recommendations of the Wage Board, but its effect on prices could hardly have been more marked had it been the first suggestion of a readjustment of rates to meet the growing deficit from Government operation.

The list had a strong opening and rails kept most of their gains at the close, but the speculative favorites of the last week ran into a considerable volume of selling and closed irregular. Steel ended the day at near its lowest price after fluctuations extending through 2 points, while Baldwin, Distillers, Bethlehem, and Sumatra had to be content with small gains. Announcement of extra payments on American Sugar, which will bring the dividend for the year up to 10 per cent., had a helpful effect, and the news of the court victory at San Francisco was followed by spirited buying of Butte & Superior, which gave that issue a net gain of 3¼. The shipping issues declined and were less active, but the reawakened interest in the rails more than offset the smaller trading in other departments and helped to run the day's total well over a million shares.

Attention was attracted by the strength in New Haven, which gained more than the dividend-paying rails on the belief that the proposed readjustment of tariffs will put that property back into the position from which it was dislodged several years ago; it sold up to 40¼ and closed with a gain of 4 points. Other active rails benefited substantially, with recoveries running from 1 to 5 points.

In marking up quotations on these issues investors are looking ahead to the time when the properties will be returned to their owners for operation. It is plain that no change in rates can increase the return which will be paid while the Government retains control, since that is fixed by results of past years, but the fear that the properties would be turned back with the rate increase still to be thrashed out with the Interstate Commerce Commission will be dissipated if the Government takes steps to make the roads self-supporting under the increased costs of war-time operation.

The new 4¼s made a new low again yesterday, selling down to 97.52 on heavy offerings. Money continues easy, call loans commanding 4 per cent., with some time money lending for thirty days at 5¾.

LONDON TRADING IS SLOW.

Members of Stock Exchange Awaiting Military Developments.

LONDON, May 14.—Business on the Stock Exchange was restricted today pending military developments. Gilt-edged securities and home rails were firm on the prospects for cheaper money, while Japanese bonds were easier and mining shares quieter, with occasional profit-taking. Mexican railways hardened, as the outlook in Mexico is viewed more favorably. Shipping stocks were irregular and the other groups featureless.

Money was in moderate demand and discount rates were quiet.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, May 14.—Trading was quieter on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes 58 francs 75 centimes for cash. Exchange on London 27 francs 16 centimes. Five per cent. loan 87 francs 65 centimes.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Call Money Rates Range from 4 to 5 Per Cent.—6 Per Cent. Paid for Time Loans.

The money market yesterday showed little change from the condition of the previous day. Call loans were made at from 4 to 5 per cent., the latter being the renewal and final quotation. Time loans secured by industrial collateral were made at 6 per cent., while those secured by mixed collateral were put through at from 5½ to 6 per cent. for maturities of sixty and ninety days and at 6 per cent. for longer maturities.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Better Feeling in Rails.

The boom in railroad stocks, which carried some issues up as much as 4 points and odd fractions, was generally traced, yesterday, to the report from Washington that rate increases of upward of 25 per cent. would be granted in the near future; not that this means anything now to the railroads, but because of the general psychological effect, both upon the Government's upkeep of the properties now and upon the situation in which the roads will find themselves when returned to their owners. Whether from force of habit or otherwise, the same factors which used to be bullish in railroad securities before the Government took them over are considered bullish still, even though the Government, not the stockholders, profit by them. In the case of Denver & Rio Grande the rise was attributed also to the revived hope, after recent arrangements, that there may be something left for the stockholders of that property after all.

Liberty 4¼s Decline Further.

The 4¼ per cent. bonds of the Third Liberty Loan declined still further yesterday, quotations on the Stock Exchange going down to 97.52, compared with 97.80, the previous low record, established Monday. The bonds sold yesterday up to 97.90, and closed at 97.80. The 4 per cent bonds of the Second Loan showed improvement, however, the price advancing to 95.06, compared with 94.60, the low record of Monday. Yesterday's lowest quotation was 94.76, and the final sale was made at 94.98.

Investment Yields of Liberty Bonds.

The 4 per cent. bonds of the Second Liberty Loan, which have twenty-four and one-half years to run, will yield investors 4.35 per cent. if bought at 94.75. The same bonds, if converted into securities bearing interest at the rate of 4¼ per cent. and having the same maturity, will yield investors 4.61 per cent. On the other hand, the 4¼ per cent. ten-year bonds of the Third Liberty Loan have an investment yield of about 4.52 per cent. when purchased at 97.62. It is the belief of bond men that before very long the prices of the two issues will find their level, in which event the yield of the 4 per cents converted into 4¼s will sell at approximately the same basis as the straight 4¼ per cent. bond. In that event the question will arise as to which of the two issues is the more desirable.

Shoulder to Shoulder.

The construction of the giant Government ordnance works near Pittsburgh will mean a large increase in the demand for steel products, but for the Steel Corporation there is a matter entailed of much greater significance than the manufacture of steel and the use of its men and its experience. This is the fact that the Government and the corporation will work shoulder to shoulder in the undertaking. It would not be too much to say that the officers of the corporation are more than glad of the opportunity to assist the country in winning the war and at the same time cooperate directly with Government officials. There has been co-operation in the last six months of a quality undreamed of before the nation entered the war, but thus far it has been of the longer-distance variety than what is now at hand.

The Michigan Central Notes.

The financing of the $8,000,000 of Michigan Central notes, which mature and will be paid off in full today, was accomplished by the Railroad Administration, but in a somewhat more roundabout manner than previous similar operations. Part of the money comes out of advances on rental account to the road, and the balance from the New York Central, the controlling company, which obtained the money by borrowing $6,000,000 from the Central Trust Company, the arrangements being made by the Railroad Administration.

Gold for South America.

Gold coin to the amount of $346,000 was withdrawn yesterday from the Sub-Treasury for shipment to South America. According to figures compiled by the Federal Reserve Board in Washington, gold imports since the beginning of the year and up to April 19 amounted to $10,561,000, while exports during the same period totaled $13,685,000. Since the outbreak of the European war (Aug. 1, 1914) gold imports have aggregated $1,725,227,000 and exports $678,047,000, making the excess of imports over exports $1,047,180,000.

Two Call Money Rates.

Two official call money interest rates are to exist in the financial district, probably beginning today. Heretofore the money lent in the "money crowd" on the Stock Exchange has been put out on collateral which consisted either entirely of railroad securities or mixed railroad and industrial securities. Banks outside the city have been loath to lend their funds on straight industrial collateral, and loans so secured have been put through by negotiations between the borrower and local banks or money brokers. It is now planned to build up a loan market on the Exchange with industrial company collateral as well as with mixed securities, and for the purpose a rate will be quoted one-half of 1 per cent. above the ordinary rate for loans secured by industrials. In practice there will be nothing new in the establishment of two rates, as "industrial loans" have long commanded the higher rate.

Complaints of Shipping Industry.

More and more stories are afloat among shipping men in respect to what they regard as the unfairness of the Shipping Board's policy. The smaller concerns complain that they are not getting their share of the business which the Government has to apportion, and the big companies say that, on the terms at which it is allotted to them, they are getting far more than they want. Several big companies have recently been informed that the Shipping Board will not be responsible for agency fees which they had been compelled to pay in foreign ports, on account of some of the Shipping Board's vessels which they are running. Apparently the Shipping Board intends that the companies shall pay all fees and other charges they can be compelled to pay out of the 1 per cent. operating fee they are to receive on these ships—which in many cases means that the companies will be doing the work for rather less than a dollar a year.

Conservatism in Shipping Industry.

Some of the industrious "boomers" of Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies stock were circulating the rumor yesterday that a 25 per cent. stock dividend by that company was impending—a rumor promptly characterized by a company official as untrue. That the story was not taken seriously was indicated by the fact that the stock receded, during the day, 2⅝ points from its high of 111. The company just now is practically an operating subsidiary for the Government, and under these conditions, like all the big shipping concerns, is considered by shipping men to be in no position to treat its capitalization and resources with other than extreme caution.

Bond Coupons for W. S. S.

The suggestion has been made that persons cashing in today their Liberty Loan 4 per cent. coupons reinvest the funds in Thrift or War Savings Stamps. It is pointed out that by so doing bondholders would be reinvesting their income on the bonds, and at the same time would be helping the Government in financing the war. The coupon payments due today amount to $76,175,323, and if that whole sum were reinvested in War Savings Stamps the Government would get back that much money, and would consequently have that much more in its Treasury.

E. A. Guggenheim Returns.

Edmond A. Guggenheim, Vice President of the Braden Copper Mines Company, returned yesterday from an inspection trip to the company's property and also to the Chile Copper Company's mines in South America. Labor conditions in Chile, he was quoted as saying, are favorable to an increasing output from mine and reduction works, and the companies should add much in the future to the amount of metal available for war needs.

Want the Service Retained.

The current issue of The Railway Age comments on a protest of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association against the complete discontinuance of outside traffic offices of railroads by the Railroad Administration. The contention is that these offices, while no longer needed to solicit business, still have an important function in quoting rates, reporting on shipments, tracing of delayed or missing shipments, and so on.

are so certain of victory that the only thing we can be at all undecided about is how long the war will last. ATCHISON EARNINGS $38,185,547 IN 1917

Net Income About the Same as Last Year, Although Gross Revenues Increase.

PROFIT OF $14.50 A SHARE

Total Receipts from Operations $165,529,519, a Gain of $21,239,281—Taxes Doubled.

The report of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railway Company for the calendar year 1917, published yesterday, shows a net income for the company practically identical with its earnings in 1916, although on a considerable increase in gross revenues. The net income available for dividends was $38,185,547, as compared with a net income for 1916 of $38,122,189, and was equivalent to earnings of $14.50 a share on the $220,455,500 of common stock outstanding, after payment of preferred dividends.

The Atchison's gross revenue from operations last year was $165,529,519, an increase over 1916 of $21,239,281, but increases in operating expenses cut down the increase in net revenues to $4,429,890, to a total of $60,306,640. As taxes increased during the year $5,164,204—very nearly doubling—the operating income was somewhat less than in 1916. A decrease in the fixed charges, due to a reduction during the year in the company's funded debt and a slight increase in non-operating income made up for this. After payment of the regular dividends of 5 per cent. on the preferred and 6 per cent. on the common stock, $7,057,000 was carried to profit and loss for the year, bringing the surplus up to $33,230,068.

During 1917 the Atchison operated 11,290 miles of road, of which 996 miles were double tracked, with three main tracks for twenty miles and four tracks for seven miles. The company during the year retired $3,878,000 of its convertible 4 per cent. bonds, and paid off all that were presented of its $5,343,000 of convertible 5s, which matured on June 1, 1917, which, with minor transactions, decreased the company's funded debt by $9,259,771. The distribution of both the common and preferred stock was wider last year than the year before, the number of preferred stockholders being 17,602, an increase of 1,003, and of common stockholders 28,669, an increase of 3,071.

President Ripley in his report briefly refers to the assumption of control by the Government with the remark: "The causes leading to the necessity for this action were not of your making." He also alludes to the resignation of Walker D. Hines, Chairman of the Board of Directors, in order to become a member of Mr. McAdoo's Railroad Administration, "with great regret."

KANSAS CITY SOUTHERN.

Net Corporate Income $2,624,143, a Gain of $601,501 Over 1916.

The report of the Kansas City Southern Railway Company for the year ended Dec. 31, 1917, shows a net corporate income after all charges of $2,624,143. This is an increase over the earnings for 1916 of $601,501, and equivalent, after payment of preferred dividends, of earnings of $5.95 a share on the outstanding common stock of the company. The gross operating revenue increased in the year from $11,289,324 to $13,547,487, and net operating revenue by $835,327 to a total of $5,341,951.

Taxes, however, increased by nearly $300,000, and non-operating income increased only slightly, while about $20,000 was saved on the company's fixed charges. On Dec. 31, 1917, the companys balance sheet showed a profit and loss surplus of $8,672,137.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

William Bianchi of William Bianchi & Co. was elected yesterday a Director of the New Netherland Bank of New York. He is President of the National Woolens and Trimmings Association and Vice President of the New York Credit Men's Association.

CITY'S NATIONAL BANKS WORTH $3,792,543,200

Total Resources on March 4, 1918, Show Decrease of $124,449,300 Since Dec. 31, 1917.

The resources of the fifty-one national banks in the City of New York total $3,792,543,200, according to a statement compiled by the Clearing House from reports furnished to the Controller of the Currency in response to the call for condition on March 4 last. The summary made public yesterday is of particular interest by reason of the fact that the Controller has just issued another call requiring reports as of May 10.

The call previous to the one of March 4 was Dec. 31, 1917, and a comparison shows that in the two months the resources of the fifty-one institutions decreased by $124,449,300. Loans diminished by $204,009,400, while aggregate deposits declined $105,411,000. It appears that the decrease in general deposits was about $210,000,000; Government deposits increased by nearly $118,000,000. Following are comparative figures for the fifty-one national banks:

THE COTTON MARKET

Absence of Solid Support After Short Covering Starts Decline—Net Loss 90-108 Points.

Official confirmation of evidence already available of the inadequacy of domestic mill consumption to make up for the great loss in exports or, indeed, to hold its own with previous years, combined with steadily improving prospects for the new crop now under way, sufficed once more to weaken the local cotton market yesterday. The Census Bureau report of April consumption only confirmed private advices, and there was, in fact, nothing really surprising in the day's news, but the complete absence of solid support for the market after the short interest had covered in on Monday, permitted the decline to get under way once more. Prices went off from 90 to 108 points on the day, and the market tone was easy at the close.

There was some little demand for May, largely, it appeared, for covering purposes, at the opening, and this contract was 9 points higher, with later months off from 6 to 17 points. There were enough May notices to be had, however, to bring that month back to the market in a short time, and before noon the entire list had receded some 70-odd points under heavy and continuous selling. At this point the floor traders judged it time to cover, and as the market was largely speculative in character, they brought prices back some 30 points. There was no real demand from any source, however, and renewed offerings sent the market tumbling at an accelerated rate in the final hour, the close being practically at the low point of the day.

The Census Bureau report, showing 544,559 bales taken by domestic mills in April, against 552,244 last year, and 4,944,792 bales for the season to date, as against 5,061,160 bales one year ago, needed only to be set against the export figures, 217,802 for April, 3,691,115 for the season, against 271,753 a year ago and 4,845,881 for the season, in the opinion of most observers, to tell the entire story. Cotton men who a few months ago were talking famine are now admitting the probability, if not the certainty, of a larger carry-over this year than last.

ASSESSMENT PLANNED ON PETROLEUM SHARES

Metropolitan Corporation Stockholders to be Asked to Raise Funds for Future Operations.

Stockholders of the Metropolitan Petroleum Corporation are to be asked in a few days to pay an assessment on their shares, to raise funds for future operations. Holders of the stock recently deposited with the Wilson Stockholders Protecting Committee, amounting to 60,000 shares, have already paid an assessment, it was learned yesterday, and negotiations have been entered into with Richmond Levering, founder of the corporation, and the interests connected with the Island Oil and Transport Company, to arbitrate certain differences between the shareowners of the two concerns.

The Wilson committee and the Matchett committee, both of which sought proxies for the recent meeting of Metropolitan stockholders, have joined forces. The aim of the joint committee action is to come to an agreement with the Island Oil and Transport Company in respect to equities in the great gusher brought in a year ago on land in Mexico, which originally belonged to the Metropolitan but was sold to the Island Company.

The committee met yesterday to discuss preliminary phases of the negotiations. It was decided to put the legal ends of the situation in the hands of Judge Delavan A. Holmes and Albert F. Jaeckel, the latter of the firm of Chadbourne, Hunt & Jaeckel. In addition to the funds needed by the Metropolitan to carry on the task of rehabilitating the company in this country, approximately $400,000 is required to pay up lease and option fees in arrears on the corporation's Mexican properties. When the call for the assessment goes out it is expected the stockholders will be asked to deposit their shares with the joint committee. The size of the impost on the 480,000 shares could not be learned yesterday, but it is expected to be no more than enough to complete the negotiations with the Island Oil interests.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

Weather conditions over the country were again very favorable for the new wheat crop. Present indications would seem to point to a crop of 600,000,000 bushels of Winter wheat as a conservative estimate. The movement of wheat at Western points continues very moderate, and the traders now pretty well satisfied that little is to be hoped for in the way of improvement. Advices from Europe were quite encouraging regarding conditions there. The crop in France is much better than last year, and this also applies to Italy and a number of other of the European nations.

RYE.

The local market was weak, with No. 2 Western quoted at $2.16, cost and freight, New York, while Minneapolis was 2c lower, at $2.08.

CORN.

The corn market displayed a very nervous undertone, and fluctuations were feverish. The May position showed a certain amount of firmness, and closed within ⅛c of the fixed maximum price, but the late months were inclined to be weak, and final prices were at the lowest, with net losses of 1⅜ to 1⅝c. In the local cash market kiln-dried No. 3 yellow was quoted at $1.60, and No. 4 yellow at $1.50, cost and freight, New York.

OATS.

The action of the May position in Chicago caused early firmness in the oats market, but subsequently an easier tone developed, and final quotations were ¼@⅞c net lower. Fears of congestion caused May shorts to cover freely early, and at one time that position sold at 76¼c, or 1¼c net higher. The local cash market was dull; natural quoted at 83½@85c; clipped white, 83½@87c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The market for hog products was weak and lower, prices declining the full extent of the limits for any one day under heavy selling prompted by a report that the Food Administration had issued a statement to the effect that the big accumulation of stocks does not justify any higher prices. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 27,000; estimated for Wednesday, 25,000. Kansas City received 10,000 and Omaha 14,000 hogs.

COFFEE.

Trading in the coffee market yesterday ruled generally very quiet, and after opening unchanged to 2 points lower, the market closed irregular, 2 points net higher to 1 point net lower. The local spot market was practically at a standstill, with no buying interest shown by interior merchants. Rio spots remained unchanged at 8⅝c for 7s, while Santos grades declined ⅛c, to the basis of 10⅝c for 4s. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

Receipts of sugar at Cuban ports for the week, though full, being over 101,000 tons, were about 13,000 tons less than a week ago. Exports showed an increase of nearly 20,000 tons, being practically 100,000 tons for the week. The International Sugar Committee reported heavy purchases of Cuban raw sugar, amounting to 308,100 bags, May shipment, at the fixed price of 4.985c, cost and freight.

National Bank Call for May 10.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The Controller of the Currency issued a call today for the condition of all national banks at the close of business on Friday, May 10.

TIDEWATER OIL EARNINGS.

Net Income Is $15,143,985, or $738,406 Less Than in 1916.

The Tidewater Oil Company and its subsidiaries report combined gross earnings of $32,811,473 in 1917, an increase of $4,790,668 over the preceding year. Expenses of $17,667,488 showed an expansion of more than $5,500,000, with the result that the net income before depreciation, amounting to $15,143,985, was $738,406 less than the year before. After making liberal allowance for depreciation and setting aside $2,245,833 for Federal taxes, a balance of $9,213,202 remained, compared with $11,994,401 in 1916.

Of the full net revenue the portion available to the Tidewater Oil stockholders was $8,854,040, against $11,022,706 in the preceding year. The report issued yesterday showed that of this the parent company's actual net income was figured at $6,989,451, compared with $5,489,845 in 1916.

R. D. Benson, President, said that the company's plants have been practically doubled in capacity, except in the department of fuel oil. Production of crude oil in 1917 amounted to 3,763,000 barrels, from 4,114 wells, with a value of $7,525,000 at the wells. During the year the company bought extensive leases in Illinois, Kentucky, and Tennessee, with fifty-five oil wells.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Prices closed firm in an active market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. During the afternoon session, especially, stocks were irregular in moving, reactions succeeding rallies and the fluctuations being as wide as a point, up or down. Net gains were made in a majority of the active issues, with the railroad securities scoring advances from one to more than four points. Transactions in these stocks were a feature of the session.

When the Civil War Was Over

When the Civil War, a conflict that had shaken the Union, was over, a period of uncharted possibilities lay ahead.

The years passed, and the country on the wreckage of war built up a new structure of prosperity. Its growth in economic strength and breadth of opportunity was rapid.

A half century's experience—identification with the country's financial and economic life in Brooklyn throughout this period of progress—strengthens this Company's faith that a greater, more prosperous future for the United States will also arise out of this present era of destruction—a future built on new foundations of patriotism, of self-sacrifice, of thrift, developed in the furnace of war.

ALLIES TO GUARD RAW MATERIALS

OPENS WAY TO CO-OPERATE

America Not Affected by London Action—Tariff System Is a Protection Here.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—As there is no commercial treaty between America and Great Britain, the announced purpose of the British Government to denounce all such conventions where they contain the most favored nation clause will have no direct effect upon the commerce of the United States. Tariff experts here pointed out today that Great Britain had always voluntarily conceded favored nation treatment to American imports.

It is learned in official quarters that the announcement in the House of Commons by Andrew Bonar Law is a step in the development of the idea that the nations now fighting the Central Powers must join hands to maintain their industries intact against Germanic aggression in the after the war commercial struggle.

President Wilson has warned Germany that she cannot expect to reap the advantage of unrestricted commercial intercourse with America if she persists in the policies she maintained by the present military régime. It is now known that since that utterance there has been an exchange of ideas between the commercial interests in the allied countries and the friendly neutral business interests in Europe and America with the purpose of crystallizing the suggestion into a workable policy.

The official records of the State Department will probably show little of these exchanges, which have been rather through unofficial channels. One of the manifestations is the demand of commercial organizations that adequate steps be taken to protect their sources of supply of raw materials after the war.

Action of this kind has been stimulated by information coming to officials here that the Teutonic powers have already inaugurated a great system of control of raw materials needed for German industries. Cartels have been formed with the object of accumulating vast stores of wool, cotton, copper, tin, and other basis raw materials, great stores of these materials are known to be in existence in neutral countries, ready to be poured into Germany the moment the sea lanes are opened, and the German plotters even have invaded America and England. A recent law suit in New York developed that a large quantity of wool had been stored in Jersey City by a firm friendly to Germany.

In the United States the tariff system affords the basis for steps to meet an attack upon the world's store of raw materials, but the British free trade system, it is pointed out, makes necessary special safeguards.

Britain Freer to Favor Allies.

LONDON, May 14.—Commenting on Andrew Bonar Law's announcement in the House of Commons Monday that the British Government intended to adopt a policy similar to that of the French Government in denouncing all commercial conventions containing a general clause regarding "most favored nations," The Times declares it will leave Great Britain free in matters of fiscal policy.

Up to this time the United Kingdom has been bound by commercial treaties with allied and neutral countries guaranteeing reciprocal "most favored nation" treatment in fiscal matters.

Commercial treaties with enemy countries were terminated by the war. So long as commercial treaties remained in force, The Times adds, it was impossible for the United Kingdom to give specially favorable treatment to her dominions or allies in customs duties on imports or to differentiate between countries to which are exported goods of the United Kingdom.

These commercial treaties are now to be denounced. This denunciation, it is said, does not mean necessarily that there will be any radical change in the fiscal policy of Great Britain, but it makes such a change possible.

PLANT TO SURPASS KRUPPS.

Neville Island, Ohio River, Selected for Government Gun Factory.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Neville Island, in the Ohio River near Pittsburgh, was selected today by the War Department as the site for the great Government ordnance plant to be built and operated in the interior.

The Neville Island plant will be the largest in the world, surpassing even that of the Krupps in Germany. It will be built and operated by the United States Steel Corporation at the solicitation of the Government. Heavy artillery and projectiles in great quantities will be made under the supervision of the Steel Corporation, which will detail experts from its organization to build the plant.

A committee of ten experts of the corporation will have immediate charge of the work. The cost of building the plant will be in the neighborhood of $50,000,000, possibly more. Officers of the Steel Corporation will work in conjunction with the War Department, and will receive no compensation for their services. The Ordnance Department already has examined plans submitted by the corporation, and construction is expected to begin almost immediately.

PITTSBURGH, May 14.—Neville Island, announced today by the War Department as the site of its great ordnance plant, is seven miles long and not more than a mile wide. At one end is the Neville furnace of the Carnegie Steel Company, a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation. Railroads occupy each bank of the river, paralleling the island, the New York Central on one side and the Pennsylvania on the other.

EXTRA DIVIDENDS DECLARED

Voted by American Sugar Refining Company and Burns Brothers.

Evidences of prosperity were supplied in the dividend declarations of two corporations yesterday. The American Sugar Refining Company declared four extra dividends of ¾ of 1 per cent. each on the common stock, payable in quarterly installments. Burns Brothers, the retail coal company, ordered an extra distribution of 5 per cent. on the common stock, payable in 4 per cent. Liberty bonds.

The American Sugar disbursements, taken with the regular dividends of 1¾ per cent. quarterly, will make the return for the twelve months, beginning July 2, amount to 10 per cent. The dividends will be paid July 2, Oct. 2, Jan. 2, and April 2, 1919. The next usual common stock dividend will be paid July 2. The regular quarterly distribution of 1¾ per cent. on the preferred stock was declared yesterday.

In commenting on the extra dividend action, President Earl D. Babst said: "Notwithstanding the present uncertainty as to operating expenses the Directors feel justified in voting these extra dividends at this time owing to the increased income received during the last three years on the company's investments."

The Burns Brothers extra will be paid June 10 to stock owners of record May 31. Fractions of less than $50 will be distributed in War Savings Stamps.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 9,168 packages. Market steady on most grades of fresh creamery. The day's arrivals were light, but considerable stock was carried over from late receipts of Monday. Demand is fair. Renovated a little easier, and ladles and packing stock move slowly. Creamery, higher than extras, a pound, 47@47½c; extras, 92 score, 46¼@46½c; firsts, 88 to 91 score, 43½@46c; seconds, 83 to 87 score, 38½@42½c; thirds, 35@37½c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 49@49½c; extras, 48@48½c; firsts, 44½@47½c; seconds, 41@44c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 46@46½c; good to prime, 40@45½c; common to fair, 36@42c; renovated, extras, 39@40c; firsts, 38@38½c; lower grades, 34@36c; imitation creamery, firsts, 35@35½c; ladles, current make, firsts, 33@34c; seconds, 31½@32c; lower grades, 30@31c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 31½@32c; No. 2, 30@30½c; lower grades, 27@29½c.

EGGS.—31,821 cases. The market is quiet, with tone easier on most grades. The proportion of strictly high quality Northern packings is comparatively small, and most receivers report some trading in these at sustained prices. On the average good lots of Western and Southern eggs arriving, however, the market is dull and some concessions are often necessary to effect sales. Full range of prices is unchanged, but the average is probably a shade lower. Strictly prime dirties in fair demand and steady. There is a good demand for prime checks, which sell promptly at firm prices; offerings of irregular quality and value. Nearby white eggs in liberal supply and moving very slowly. Only a small proportion of stock is of strictly fancy quality, and only such command top quotation. A large part of the supply has to be cleaned out in range of 38@40c. Fresh gathered extras, a dozen, 38@38½c; storage packed, firsts, 37@37½c; regular packed, extra firsts, 37@37½c; regular packed, firsts, 35½@36½c; seconds and poorer, 33½@35c; fresh gathered, storage packed, dirties, 33½c; No. 1 regular, packed, 32½@33c; No. 2 and poorer, 31@32c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 30@31½c; under grades, 25@29c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 40@42c; ordinary to prime, 38@39c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 38@40c; Western and Southern gathered whites, 36½@38½c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 39@40c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 36@37½c; duck eggs, 29@45c.

The old lease, also for a twenty-one year term, expires Oct. 1, 1918, and Mr. Sherry has the right during the new term of removing the present building on the site and erecting a modern commercial structure. The building is now used as a candy shop in conjunction with Mr. Sherry's larger establishment, held under a lease from the Brokaw Estate.

PACIFISTS CORNERED LABOR DELEGATES

PLEAS FALL ON DEAF EARS

Stern Determination to Win the War Asserted by Envoys at London Dinner.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 14.—A dispatch to The London Daily Telegraph says:

"I have received a remarkable report from an English Socialist who accompanied the American labor delegates to Paris the other day. He tells me that an absolute pro-German boycott of the visit was deliberately carried out.

"The American delegates, who are all patriots, were cornered by the pacifist section of the French Parliamentary Socialist Party and the French General Labor Federation. How this was engineered is not clear, but it was engineered very thoroughly.

"Thus it was not until a few hours before the American delegates' departure that patriotic French Socialists got in touch with or even saw them. The deputation attended a reception in the Chamber of Deputies by Deschanel. At this reception French Socialist Deputies who held the same opinions as the American delegates—that is, who are for peace only with victory—rushed up to my informant and said:

"'What has been done with the American delegates? Not one of us has been asked to any of their meetings, or has even seen them.'

"My informant was able to arrange between 6 and 7 o'clock that evening a meeting between these patriotic French Socialist Deputies and the American delegates. This hurried hour, during which the Americans had to do their packing, was absolutely the only time they met the patriotic French Socialist Deputies—that is, the forty who have just signed the manifesto to Mr. Branting.

"Throughout the previous days of the visit the American delegates met only the pacifist section of the French Socialist Party at conferences and luncheon. Throughout the meetings and banquet French pacifists made speeches in French and the American delegates made patriotic speeches in English. It was the most extraordinary case of camouflage known, and I am asked earnestly to expose it.

"The French pacifists who made speeches were all in favor of calling the internationale and meeting the Germans. These speeches, in great part, were not translated into English for fear of shocking the American delegates, and, vice versa, passages of the American delegates' speeches were not translated into French and not published in the French pacifist papers. All this while the patriotic French Socialists were kept aloof and never knew where to meet the American delegates until at last they assembled at the reception in the Chamber."

Laborites Pledge War to End.

LONDON, May 14.—James Wilson, Chairman of the American Labor delegation, at a dinner at the House of Commons last night given to the delegates by the General Federation of Trades Unions, reiterated the determination of American labor to support the President, Congress and the allied peoples until freedom was won, not only for the Allies, but for the people of Germany themselves. He said that the fight should go on until the world was rid of militarism for all time.

At the beginning of the war, Mr. Wilson said, the labor movement in America had invited the labor movements of the world to a conference to consider eventual terms of peace. The reply of the German labor leaders was a refusal to participate.

John P. Frey of the American delegation proposed a toast to the cause of democracy. He mentioned the reception to the delegation by Premier Lloyd George in Downing Street in the afternoon and referred to the historical fact that it was in that same room that Lord North, then Prime Minister, and others had discussed the question of the democracy of the United States at the close of the Revolutionary War.

Sir Thomas Mackenzie, High Commissioner for New Zealand, said that he welcomed the Americans personally and as representatives of their great Republic. The people of New Zealand, he said, had the warmest feelings toward America, which was a sort of half-way house between them and their motherland. Democracy was on trial. If it came out of the war sound and safe, as the speaker believed, it would justify the worldwide continuance of democratic principles for all time.

The High Commissioner for Canada, Sir George Perley, said that as long as English-speaking democracies held together they would be able to consolidate the world in the interests of humanity and democratic government. As brothers in arms, they understood each other and got to know each other better. Sir George said that he hoped the alliance would last for many generations.

MAYOR IS CENSURED FOR HEALTH INQUIRY

Civil Service Reformers Say It Has Broken Morale of Department.

Criticism of Governor Whitman, the State and New York City Civil Service Commissions, and the Republican Legislature is embodied in the annual report of the Executive Committee of the Civil Service Reform Association, made public yesterday. The Hylan administration is censured, notably for the manner in which the recent inquiry into the Health Department was conducted, but Mayor Hylan personally is commended for some of his official acts.

"One Health Commissioner has resigned his office, alleging that the Mayor forced unfit appointees upon his department and that he was unwilling to dismiss qualified persons who occupied both permanent and advisory positions," the report says. "An investigation of the Health Department by a special committee of which James E. MacBride, President of the Civil Service Commission, is Chairman, and including also the other Civil Service Commissioners and the Secretary of the commission, has done much to break down the morale of the department.

"This committee believes in periodical inquiries into the administration of departments. The Civil Service Commission is logically the agency to make investigations into matters of personnel. At the same time it is the function of the Civil Service Commission to protect the merit system and the employes under that system from hostile patronage attacks."

The report holds Mayor Hylan and the State Civil Service Commission jointly responsible for the failure that ended the attempt of the Civil Service Reform Association to have clerks, deputy clerks, and assistant clerks in the Municipal Courts, in all 94 positions, transferred from the exempt to the competitive class.

MANY CITY NURSES TAKEN BY THE WAR

Dr. Copeland Says Drain Must Stop if Soldiers Are to be Cared For.

DOCTORS AND INTERNES, TOO

If the Government continues to call to the Red Cross, the Army and the Navy, nurses from the city hospitals under the jurisdiction of the Health Department, the city will be unable to give proper nursing care to soldiers and sailors and will have to close its doors to them. This statement was made yesterday by Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Health Commissioner, in recounting the plight of the city with regard to nurses, as well as physicians and male internes in the hospitals under the jurisdiction of the Health Department.

Commissioner Copeland made it clear that the conditions were due solely to the war crisis and the need for trained doctors, nurses, and internes in the army, the navy, and the Red Cross. He said that the city hospitals began to care for soldiers with contagious diseases a year ago and that since then twenty-five physicians employed in the institutions have left the service of the city's hospitals.

"Six of these physicians left the Willard Parker Hospital to enter the military service," he said. "At the Willard Parker Hospital we have treated in the last year 2,519 soldiers and sailors. From the Riverside Hospital where we took care of 541 patients for the Government, twelve physicians have gone into army service. Four doctors went into service from the Kingston Avenue Hospital where we treated 781 patients, and three from the Municipal Sanatorium for Tuberculosis where ten patients were treated. The total number of patients treated has been 3,651.

Dr. Copeland added that at present there are on duty 21 male hospital physicians and 6 male internes in the hospitals under the Health Department's jurisdiction. Of the physicians, he said, 3 had commissions, but were unassigned to duty, while 7 were in the draft and liable to be called at any moment.

Commissioner Copeland announced that he would soon enter on a campaign of ridding the city of medical quacks who spread their advertisements in public places.

Dr. Charles F. Bolduan, Director of the Bureau of Public Health Education, will start today on an extended leave of absence and his resignation will go into effect Nov 1. His last activity was the announcement of an educational campaign against the fly menace to be carried on under the auspices of the Chelsea Neighborhood Association in the district between Fourteenth Street and Forty-second Street, Fifth Avenue to the Hudson River. The campaign, which will continue for two weeks, marks the beginning of the all-Summer drive in this district to swat the fly. Thousands of leaflets and posters will be distributed in the public schools, and the children will be taught why the fly is an enemy of public health. A statistician attached to the Health Department has calculated that a single fly which lays its eggs on June 1 will have 4,353,564,672,000,000,000,000 offsprings by Sept. 28.
